London Rounds Up Enemy Aliens To Prevent Aid For Parachutists

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Monday), May 13.—Successful attacks on land and from the air against the German invasion of Holland and Belgium were reported officially today by Great Britain while, at home, Scotland Yard rounded up thousands of enemy aliens.

A communique from the British general headquarters said that "the successful advance of the British Expeditionary Force into Belgium in conjunction with the French forces is continuing as planned. Minor encounters between our cavalry and the enemy have ended to our advantage."

A war office official explained that the term "cavalry" applied to motorized units which carry out advance guard actions."

The Air Ministry reported 45 German planes had been shot down since Saturday morning and that "it can be safely assumed that as many again have been destroyed or damaged."

Unofficial reports said R. A. F. squadrons have shot down 68 German planes in two and a half days of fighting up to noon Sunday. At least 25 more "probably" were accounted for, British correspondents said.

Rail Lines Hit

The ministry also said German railway communications have been interrupted by British air fighters and that "important road and railway damage also was caused in Germany between the Rhine and the Dutch frontier, including damage to supply trains and a railway station."

Earlier reports from correspondents with the British air force told how Britain's Blenheim bombers hammered German concentrations in dawn raids in Belgium.

Thirty-five British planes so far have failed to return but some are known to have made forced landings in Belgium and France.

To make the home front as secure as possible against a blitzkrieg invasion through the air such as was visited upon Holland, Belgium and Luxenbourg Friday, the home office began a roundup of all German and Austrian males from the ages of 16 to 60.

The internment order covered the entire eastern half of the country and most of the southern coast but not London itself. Alien men other than Germans and Austrians in the area were ordered to report daily to police, stay indoors from 8 p. m. to 6 a. m., and travel only in public conveyances. This order includes Americans.

Roosevelt Forgets War to Cruise Down Potomac

President Roosevelt yesterday put aside the problems presented by Europe's war to enjoy a quiet afternoon cruising the Potomac with a small group of friends.

Lured from the White House by a clear sky and warm breeze, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt motored to the Navy Yard dock at noon and boarded the Presidential yacht. They were joined by Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Miss Marguerite A. Le Hand, the President's personal secretary.

The Secret of Eben Emael

New Weapon Is Explosive, Gas Or Propaganda, Experts Believe

By Robert Kleiman
Post Staff Writer

Army experts and military attaches here concluded last night that Germany's closely guarded "new means of attack," by which a handful of airmen reportedly subdued Eben Emael, one of the strongest forts in the Liege defense zone of Belgium, is a secret gas, a mysterious high explosive, or an "old weapon"—propaganda—designed to frighten the Allies.

The report of the German high command was the subject of excited discussion in military circles yesterday.

Dispatches from Bern, Switzerland, revealed that neutral military attaches there believe the Germans have developed a new "nerve gas" which produces lassitude and inability to coordinate the muscles.

The gas, which supposedly incapacitates soldiers for a short time, can be guarded against only by special types of gas masks, which the Belgian troops did not possess. Another report said Allied and Belgian forces have captured a number of German troops equipped with new gas masks, which now are being studied.

Brig. Gen. Charles T. Harris, jr., assistant to the chief of the ordnance, said last night that he would rule out the possibility of a new explosive, but not a new gas, although, he said, "it doesn't sound as if science in this country could be left so far behind."

He is inclined to believe, he declared, that the German forces accomplished the "amazing feat" by a surprise landing of parachute troops, armed to the teeth with powerful automatic weapons.

"Surprise," he added, "is the one thing in which the Germans have excelled."

In this he was joined by Col. Harry K. Rutherford, of the Ordnance Department, who said that these tactics would demand "perfect coordination" of air and ground forces after the defending troops had been driven under cover by heavy bombing.

"We don't place much stock in the fantastic reports of new weapons," Col. Rutherford said. "There was no sign of such a weapon in Norway, and the Germans would have undoubtedly used it there if they had it."

One member of the Army Chemical Warfare Service said that he had heard rumors of a new "nerve gas," but that so far as he knew it was

Defense Funds Top Agenda Of Congress

Debt Limit Periled By New Measures Coming Up This Week

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

New demands for national defense funds in the face of intensified war abroad last night had assumed top position in the interest of a Congress facing decisive battles over CAA reorganization, the Walter-Logan bills and relief needs for the coming fiscal year.

Threatening further the Nation's $45,000,000,000 debt limit, calls for from $350,000,000 to $400,000,000 for additional defense measures were to be given committee consideration during the week.

Further indicating Governmental concern over the spread of German aggression, Secretary of State Hull is expected in two scheduled addresses today to deal with problems raised for this country by war developments. The Secretary will deliver an address of welcome to the eighth American Scientific Congress at 11 a. m., and as president of the organization will speak before the American Society of International Law at 9 p. m.

Senators Hit U. S. War Loans To Aid Allies

Hiram Johnson Warns Sending Finances Would Involve Nation

By Arthur F. Degreve
United Press Staff Writer

A storm of Congressional opposition last night hit proposals that the United States throw open her treasure chest to finance the Allied participation in the European war.

The suggestion was made by Chairman Andrew J. May (Democrat), Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, who urged relaxation of the Johnson Act which bans American credits or loans to nations which have defaulted on their World War debts to this country. He contended that "we ought to do everything we can to help the Allies."

Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California author of the law and one of the Nation's outstanding isolationists, vigorously rejected this contention.

"Any attempt to repeal or modify the act which bears my name will be vigorously contested," he said. "Experience in the last war taught us that the surest way to get into war is to let our money precede us. Then when more money is needed by the belligerents, we let them have it and then go into the struggle

A Plea for Peace

War Mothers Express Hope No More Sons Will Be Slain

By Lucia Giddens

American War Mothers gathered in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday afternoon and expressed the hope that their ranks would never be increased.

Their sixteenth annual Mother's Day services echoed with a graver note of concern for the future than any of those in previous years.

Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard, appealing for preparedness, declared:

"World conditions show no change for the better, which can lead us to hope that the future of our country will be free from the danger of war.

"Thinking alone of peace, this country has ever been unready for war, which has resulted in adding to the tremendous cost of such wars as it has entered, first in lives and then in material cost.

"Many useless sacrifices have come from the necessity of sending men to fight our battles improperly trained.

"This is no time for a nation hoping to avoid war to be weak in means of self-defense. To be prepared is not an invitation to fight, but, on the contrary, is a warning to the aggressor to keep hands off. To be unprepared to fight is an advertisement of weakness and constant invitation for attack.

"Despite the desires and wishes of many uninformed but sincere people, an army cannnot be raised overnight, nor can a peace ship bring truce between warring nations."

River Defenses Crossed by Foe; Hollanders Turn On Fifth Column

By Max Harrelson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Amsterdam (Monday), May 13.—The fighting Dutch, mopping up "Trojan horse" traitors and Nazi parachute troops in the interior, fell back in central and southern Holland today before the merciless German pounding which carried Adolf Hitler's veterans across the Maas and Ijssel rivers and deep into the northern Netherlands provinces.

The Dutch high command acknowledged these reverses in a communique which said the Germans had made their way over the Maas and Ijssel rivers "at various points."

But, the high command added, French troops are fighting the enemy in east Brabant to the south and earlier reports said 20,000 British troops had been fed into the land and floodwater defenses of the Dutch.

Parachutists "Overcome"

The advancing Germans were being bombed by Dutch planes and fresh parachute troops landed in the interior have been "overcome," the communique added.

The Dutch command failed to give the extent of the withdrawal from the frontier lines, but it said that the troops have been "partly withdrawn."

Troops in the undefended northern provinces fulfilled their mission by slowing up the oncoming Germans as they fell back to the interior, the communique reported.

Claiming the upper hand over airlanded German troops in the seaport city of Rotterdam and smashing an uprising of Germans in The Hague, seat of government, with armored cars and shellfire, the authorities went to work to clean up Amsterdam with a vengeance.

While a sabotaged air-raid siren system howled crazily and repeatedly, and saboteurs created a water shortage, police and troops rounded up many hundreds in an overnight search which covered every street and building in this city of 800,000.

United States Legation Hit

The chancellery of the American Legation in The Hague was struck by nine bullets during street fighting Saturday when Dutch troops overpowered Germans sniping at them from houses.

The Dutch declared the main part of Rotterdam is in their hands after fierce fighting with German forces and "Fifth Columns" and that Dutch troops had recaptured the Maas River Bridge, which German troops seized Friday after landing in seaplanes and parachutes.

Blitzkrieg Old Stuff, Officer Says; Lee Lost by It

Camp Beauregard, La., May 12 (AP). Comparing Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg methods to the lightning thrusts of the Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee, an Army officer said here today that Lee was defeated by the same type of "constrictor" warfare the Allies are employing.

In camp at the Third Army's war maneuvers to test the speed and efficiency of 70,000 modernized American soldiers, the officer, a student of military history, said:

"The blitzkrieg is old stuff. It's a catchy kind of name that sticks in the popular mind. Hitler didn't invent that kind of war. Lee never heard the German name for it, but he knew what it meant and made good use of it."

The officer cited Lee's raids up the Cumberland Valley in an effort to end the Civil War in a hurry by crippling and terrifying the North.

'Hard-Pressed,' Brussels Admits; Government May Leave Capital

By Robert Okin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Brussels, May 12.—A German spearhead flanking the fortress city of Liege blasted its way to a point 13 miles in the rear of the city itself today before it was halted by Belgian soldiers entrenched in second-line positions, Belgium's premier acknowledged tonight.

The Germans, have been stopped near Waremme, 20 miles southwest of the Dutch border at Maastricht and about 45 miles east of Brussels, Premier Hubert Pierlot declared.

He also told the hard-pressed Belgians that their troops are successfully resisting new German attacks north and east of the Albert Canal after being driven back from some first-line defenses along that waterway.

Nazi Corpses Dot Ground

"In spite of many (frontal) attacks against the fortifications of Liege, the enemy is unable to make any advance," Pierlot said. Approaches to the east of the vast Liege forts are "covered with German corpses," he added.

The Germans who reached Waremme first blasted a hole in the Albert Canal forts just outside Maastricht. They reached Maastricht by cutting across the Dutch "appendix province" of South Limburg. The Albert Canal forts are the northern extension of the Liege zone and the ones opposite Maastricht are about 15 miles north of Liege itself.

There was a general exodus under way tonight from Brussels. Many left in comfortable cars, others trudged on foot or rode on trucks. The authorities, however, controlled the roads to France to permit an unceasing march of English and French troops into Belgium.

Faced with losses admittedly terrible, the government prepared for the eventuality of flight from Brussels, but decided to stay for the present.

Foreign Minister Spaak told a press conference the situation was "stabilized," even in the worst part of the front.

French in Line

Fighting continued fiercely in the new positions, the Belgian war communique reported tonight, with the defenders "standing their ground in spite of the action of armored units supported by aircraft which attacked our columns on the ground."

That the French troops now are in the front lines with their new Belgian allies was revealed in the communique.

"A French counter-attack against the enemy motorized units was successful," it said. "A great number of enemy tanks were destroyed."

The advance unit which pushed to the southwest from Maastricht through Tongres (Tongeren) to Waremme had crossed the canal in the Maastricht sector.

Premier Pierlot said the German advance unit had fought its way through Tongres despite fierce re-

Stronger Stand In War Urged For Americas

Argentine Minister Calls Neutrality A 'Dead Conception'

By Rafael Ordorica
Associated Press Staff Writer

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 12. Declaring neutrality in present circumstances of the world a "fiction" and a "dead conception," Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantillo tonight propose dthat the Americas adopt a "nonbelligerent" attitude instead.

The foreign minister's statement was made after a conference among Cantilo, President Ortiz, United States Ambassador Norman Armour and the Brazilian Ambassador.

[State Department officials refused last night to comment one way or another on the proposal at Buenos Aires. Holding it was strictly an Argentine suggestion, they said there would be no statement on it immediately. The United Press said there was no doubt that Allied action in "protecting" with troops and warships the Dutch West Indies was a strong factor in uneasiness shown in various American capitals regarding the possibility—however remote—that this hemisphere might directly or indirectly become involved in the conflict.—Editor's note.]

Nazis Batter Maginot Line On 40-Mi. Front

Germans Strike After Heavy Gunning Prepares for Advance

By Roy P. Porter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 12.—German troops laid lethal siege to Allied defenses in three countries today, breaking through the first Belgian defense line, hammering at France's Maginot Line along a 40-mile front, and creating apparent chaos in Holland's interior with swarms of parachute soldiers.

Large German forces attacked in France head-on between Forbach and the Vosges Mountains after heavy artillery preparations which began before dawn. It was not immediately determined whether the assault meant prolonged attack on the Maginot Line or was a feint to divert French troops from operations to the north.

Renewed Nazi assaults were reported to have met little success in south Belgium, where French military quarters said a strong force was pushing west from Luxembourg toward the Belgian town of Neufchateau, on a railway.

The French said French troops driving into the Duchy caused

Motor Units Smash 80 Miles To North Sea In 48 Hours

By George Axelsson
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 12.—All of northern Netherlands from the border to the North Sea is tonight in German hands.

According to tonight's communique, supplemented by semiofficial bulletins, motorized units supported by aircraft smashed their way from the border to the sea, a distance of roughly 80 miles, in a little more than 48 hours.

German troops occupied Harlingen on the North Sea this afternoon, said the official communique, claiming the occupation of all of Groningen Province. Military circles consider that the army is 24 hours ahead of its schedule of objectives.

On the Belgian front the Germans claim to have broken through the strong Mastricht-Hasselt defense line. Through this breach, the Germans can pour masses of troops on to Louvain and Brussels, at the same time flanking the main Belgian fortified lines, and if late reports received here are to be believed the Germans are already taking full advantage of their flanking opportunities.

"New Methods" Used

The destruction and capture of the Eben Emael forts in the Liege cluster, due to yet unexplained "new methods" but believed to refer to new artillery and explosives, is accepted here as a threat to the Maginot Line. The alleged immunity to attack of the French chain must now be seen in an entirely new light, military experts here proclaim.

With the possession of Groningen Province, it seems obvious that the Germans will push south, gravely threatening Amsterdam and the other principal Dutch cities. Already, the generally reliable headquarters communique claims, a serious dent has been made into the line running eastward to Amersfoort, called the Grebbe Line, as well as the Peel Line further south.

All Dutch border troops have been routed and 5,000 prisoners were taken in these sectors, the Germans say.

Motorized War

A summing up of the news of the first two days of the German offensive against the Lowlands seems to indicate that the German blitzkrieg is well under way, with large-scale motorized infantry action developing which at the moment is concentrated on crushing all Belgo-Dutch resistance.

If the German claims prove true, the Reich's army has disposed of all Dutch fortified positions in the areas so far attacked, including what the Hollanders must have considered their most modern military and fortifications equipment. This, added to the successes claimed in the Liege sector, is making the Germans confident that their army is irresistible.

These successes they are prone to accept as proof of widely spread reports that the army has a secret weapon powerful enough to pulverize all. With northern Holland in their possession the Germans have simultaneously dented the Ijssel Line, which runs from the mouth of the Ijssel River on the Zuider Zee north of Zwolle, to Arnhem.

The latter city is claimed to be in German hands. Having also pierced the Grebbe Line to the south, they have at that point cut

War of Nerves Comes to D. C.

Power Line Blast Blacks Out Part of Capital; Citizens Rush to Roofs, Scan Sky for Planes

By Marshall Andrews

Peaceful Washington last night had an unexpected taste of the plight of warring Europe and Washington didn't like it.

Lights throughout a large part of the northwest section suddenly blinked off at 9:31. Merrymakers in hotels, movie audiences, serious thinkers in formal conclave, congregations at church, late workers in offices and people simply sitting at home found themselves abruptly staring into impenetrable and unexplained darkness. Elevator riders were stuck between floors; motorists, bereft of traffic lights, thrust themselves into scores of squawking tangles; radio listeners heard their sets go ominously silent.

In thousands of minds rose the one thought: Blackout.

Immediately hotel and apartment switchboards were jammed with calls from frightened residents. At police headquarters, newspaper offices, radio stations and hospitals harassed telephone operators strove to calm callers who insisted war had engulfed Washington.

For some time after the lights failed, the Potomac Electric Power Co. itself could not explain the cause. Eventually it was traced to Eighteenth and G streets northwest.

There a cable joint had exploded, blowing off the manhole cover. Some citizen turned in a fire alarm and power company linemen arrived to find residents rushing from their homes, some in nightclothes, many peering skyward, all of them excited by the blast, the blackness and the scream of arriving fire trucks.

The area blacked out roughly was that bounded by Thirteenth street on the east, Twentieth on the west, K on the north, and the river on the south. It included the uptown hotel center, part of the theater district, the White House, the State Department Building, several hospitals and any number of large apartments. The White House and the State Department Building were not affected, however, and all hospitals had emergency power plants for their operating rooms.

At the Mayflower, 800 guests at the annual banquet of the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood, were left in darkness. After a moment of shocked silence, the voice of Cantor Abrasha Robofsky welled from the stage in an old Hebrew folk song; men and boys joined in and, when someone discovvered the spotlight still worked, the cantor was flooded in brilliant light. From then until current was restored 26 minutes later, the banqueters sang and awards were pre-more than 60 miles into Dutch territory, and in the sector south of the Rhine they have broken through the Peel Line, between Nimwegen and Roeremond.

Industrial Centers Bombed

Aviation, since daybreak, has incessantly pounded all Dutch, Belgian and French flying fields, traffic and industrial nerve centers, with what is described as gratifying results. Thirty planes are claimed to have been destroyed on the ground at Evraux, west of Paris, and at Oreleans 36.

Although yesterday the Germans unofficially claimed a total of 400 enemy planes destroyed, they have revised this figure to read 300, adding to it 64 shot down in battle and 12 by antiaircraft.

On the Lowland coasts the air force attacked war vessels, transports and tankers. A 15,000-ton troopship is stated to have been sunk off the Dutch coast, with six other craft fired, and in the middle of the North Sea, dive bombers are alleged to have sunk a new British cruiser. In the harbor of Flushing three transports and one tanker were hit, and somewhere in the North Sea a destroyer was damaged, it is alleged.

Thirty-five German planes are admitted to be missing.

Allied Raids Minimized

The Germans say very little or nothing about Allied air incursions over their territory beyond generally minimizing their importance. Nor have they yet revealed their own casualties in the land fighting.

In Belgian territory the Germans say they have advanced some 10 miles beyond the Belgo-Luxembourg border in the direction of the Ardennes. This would mean that they are well beyond Arlon on the Namur rail line. From there they could if they feel sufficiently encouraged by the successes claimed against the Liege foreifications turn to the south against that long line of strong French forts of historically famous names like Sedan, Montemedy, and Longuy, and which are a prolongation of the Maginot system.

German army circles boast that if they were able to smash the Liege defenses, as well as a series of Dutch pillboxes, more or less like matchwood, they will have no serious difficulty with anything the French forts and the Maginot Line can offer.

One military observer here said tonight that the Germans were well on the way to success, and that everything depended on the extent to which they can continue mobile warefare on principles laid down by ancient masterminds like Von Schliffen, Von Moltke and Von Seeckt. The implication was that their plan was not equally workable if they are once forced to dig in as in 1914.

Artillery at 100 Yards

Point-blank fire of heavy artillery at a range of 100 yards broke the resistance of Dutch frontier forts, according to the report of the German war correspondents attached to the fighting troops who crossed the border in the Maastricht sector.

They found the bridge across the Juliana Canal leading to Sevensweert blown up and concrete Dutch fortifications covering the passage across the canal into the interior.

Three direct hits from a field gun sufficed to crack the concrete casings of the fort, the correspondent reports. A white flag was flown from the bridgehead and Dutch soldiers came out with their hands up.

Blockhouse Blown Open

Another fort to the right of the bridge covered the road with machine guns. An armored German artillery tractor drew up and its gun was unlimbered. Again the Germans fired across the canal. After a few shots, it is reported, the concrete blockhouse was blown wide open.

Further to the west, the Germans reached the Neederwert-Naar-Wessen Canal, where again they found Dutch fortifications blocking their passage. Heavy artillery once more was unlimbered and the forts bombarded. One of the forts, it is reported, was set afire and the Dutch surrendered.

sistance "and in the evening were standing near Waremme."

Pierlot's war report was punctuated by the shriek of an air raid alarm. The Belgian capital had been attacked six times from the air during the morning before he spoke and in Louvain, to the east of Brussels, air alarms came every ten minutes.

Masses of Chutists Dropped

Antwerp was heavily attacked from the air yesterday and a large number of casualties was reported.

New masses of parachute troops were dropped during the night, many carrying dummies to throw the defenders off their guard. They also carried miniature radios. Some fell in the royal park.

Hardly a community was left untouched as German planes worked incessantly for a lightning cleanup of the area between Antwerp and Brussels.

The Belgian people were called upon to give blood for transfusions as military and civilian casualties mounted.

In what he called a frank and truthful account of the military situation, Premier Pieriot said the Germans were unable to penetrate on any considerable scale Friday, when the attack began, because of "thorough demolitions immediately carried out."

Saturday, he said, the Germans crossed the Albert Canal. The officer in charge of the destruction of two bridges near Maastricht was killed by an aerial bomb and the second in command hesitated to carry out the prearranged orders.

During the interval, Pierlot said, German motorized units streamed across the bridges.

Officer Blasts Bridge, Self

Later, a Belgian officer in a suicide dash through the German lines blew up himself and one bridge.

Across the other, Pierlot added, the Germans attacked "with an enormous mass of tanks and aircraft."

The Germans then advanced to Tongeren despite fierce resistance.

A noon communique issued by the Belgian army said the defenders were opposing the Germans with "energetic resistance," continuing to defend "step by step positions assigned to them by the operations plan."

This communique also said the enemy force "which entered our defense lines did not achieve any important aim. In many places groups of parachutists have been annihilated. Many enemy planes have been brought down."

In Luxembourg Province, he said, heavy German forces have attacked east of the Meuse (Maas) and Belgian trooops are retiring methodically.

Foreign Minister Spaak told the press conference that the government is not discouraged. He said the events would not justify a low morale and that although the situation is serious and Belgium is faced with a great army, the situation may be "perfectly recovered" later. He called for calm and cool heads.

De Valera Assails Lowland Invasion

Dublin, May 12 (AP).—Premier De Valera told a Fianna Fail Party meeting in Galway tonight that his people were prepared to let bygones be bygones once Ireland has obtained her independence of Britain.

He voiced regret that there still was cause for differences "at a time like the present."

Earlier De Valera said "a cruel wrong has been done Belgium and Holland, and it would be unworthy of this small nation if it did not utter a protest."

Defense Funds Top Congress Agenda

portant matters before Congress include:

Pensions for widows and dependents of World War veterans, regardless of whether the veteran died of service-connected disabilities, will be voted on by the House today.

Action on the agriculture supply bill, including appropriation increases made by the Senate, will follow the pension bill in the House.

The Senate is to take up, probably today, Senator McCarran's resolution to kill the Presidential order transferring the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department and abolishing the Air Safety Board.

Senate action on the House-approved Walter-Logan bill to subject rules and regulations of Government administrative agencies to court review may come during the week.

A relief bill expected to carry $985,000,000 with the provision it may be used in eight months, if necessary, is slated to reach the House from the Appropriations Committee Thursday.

To Call Up Vinson Bill

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, was hopeful last night that he could find an opportunity to call up the House-approved Vinson Naval Expansion Authorization bill this week. The Senate program already was crowded with other matters, but, it was pointed out, widespread concern over the Nazi's invasion of the Low Countries made its objective of adding 11 per cent to the authorized strength of the Navy a subject of urgent interest.

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, who piloted that bill through the House, meanwhile prepared for hearings Tuesday on proposals looking to the speeding up of work on the 60-odd ships now being built for the Navy under previous expansion authorizations. He expects the Navy to ask for $48,000,000 to $50,000,000 for this purpose.

Secret Bill Due

Then Vinson plans to turn his committee, beginning Thursday, to a still secret program for expansion of the naval air strength. The Navy's current aviation program calls for 3,200 planes and a reserve of 6,000 pilots. How much beyond those limits it now wants to go Vinson would not hint beyond saying that "it will make your eyes pop out."

Moreover, after the Senate disposes of the new 11 per cent expansion bill, Representative Vinson expects to take up the problem of getting work started without delay on the new tonnage it contemplates.

The Administration is expected to back a $350,000,000 to $400,000,000 increase in defense funds, estimated essential to round out the war inspired protective mobilization plan, by greatly expanded procurement of ammunition, rifles, artillery and tanks, through a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee now considering the House-approved War Department Appropriation Bill.

May Divert Funds

The threat to the debt limitation led to a suggestion that some of the funds appropriated or proposed for such activities as farm benefits, relief and rivers and harbors be diverted to the defense program. In that connection, Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, said that in view of the developments abroad, "defense is a lot more important now than a lot of things we are spending money on."

In some circles it was indicated that the "anger" expressed by President Roosevelt over the Nazis' attack on the Low Country neutrals was so widely shared in Congress that proposals to levy new taxes and increase the debt limit would now command majority support.

Some Senators, concerned with both economy and defense problems, however, were threatening to demand an accounting from the Army and Navy services to explain why the hundreds of millions already provided for their expansion has not shown more results.

Air Force Expansion

Expansion of the Army Air Force is expected to be recommended in a report to be presented today by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, to a Senate Military Appropriations subcommittee considering the $785,000,000 Army supply bill.

President Roosevelt's expression of hope that Nazi aggression might be "arrested," conveyed in his Saturday message to King Leopold of Belgium, was generally praised on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, said he was "in entire sympathy with the President," and Representative Bloom, of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, declared the President had expressed what "every intelligent American is hoping for."

D. C. Gets Taste Of Blackout

Candles Appear

Throughtout the hotel, candles appeared as if by magic, covers were snatched from those on dining tables, attendants appeared with lanterns and flashlights. There was some excitement, no panic. Guests sat about the lobby or went to the sidewalks to look at the sky.

At the Park Central Apartments, victim of a "blackout" several months ago, plenty of candles were on hand. Dozens of residents clambered to the roof, scanned the heavens and speculated on the chance of attack by air.

Delegates to the Daughters of the American Depression, in session at the Roger Smith Hotel, were balked in their intention to select a "Miss Depression." Delegate Rita Sullivan, who was speaking, concluded her talk and the meeting adjourned because of darkness.

The Ambassador Hotel reported little excitement except at its basement swimming pool and that was soon calmed. At the Maury Apartments, residents rushed out in nightclothes.

Some 200 art lovers at the exhibition of paintings by Theodora Kane at Wesley Hall, 1703 K street northwest, milled about in the sudden darkness until reassured by the management.

Two radio stations in the National Broadcasting chain, WRC and WMAL, were silenced several minutes until they could place emergency power in service and begin broadcasting phonograph records. In those few minutes their switchboards were so swamped with calls they broadcast explanation and reassurance.

WOL, Mutual Broadcasting System's outlet, was off the air 25 minutes. Columbia Broadcasting System escaped the blackout.

heavy losses yesterday to German attackers.

French and British units are speeding north to the assistance of their besieged Allies.

One French military commentator said the Allied operation is being carried out on schedule despite German aerial attacks.

In the western front action, fighting was general along the entire salient where the French outposts and fortified front line are backed up by the underground fortresses of the main Maginot Line.

Infantry and trench mortar fire was strong in the regions of Forbach, Sarreguemines, and Bitche, with continuing attacks by an undetermined number of German troops.

Tonight's communique said in part:

"The situation in Holland has improved today. British aviation is giving vigorous help to the Dutch defense . . . Allied airplanes attacking bridges in the Maastricht region and enemy columns" have caused heavy German losses.

"The enemy is exerting an important effort in the Belgian Ardennes (mountains) where violent engagements have taken place.

"Combats have recommenced on the Luxembourg frontier.

"The enemy also attacked our advance positions between the Warndt forest and the Saar."

The night communique also said 30 more German planes were shot down during the repeated air raids over northeastern France.

The morning communique said in part:

"In the region of the Albert Canal and the Meuse (Maas) River, where German attacks continued with extreme violence, our aviation massively and effectively intervened in support of Belgian troops.

". . . Our bombers attacked enemy columns and bridges of the greatest importance. Eight enemy planes were brought down . . .

"On land, our approach operations continued normally according to plan.

"In the region of the Saar and west of the Vosges, where in the latter part of the night fighting began at many points, German artillery opened violent and continuous fire."

Gamelin Directs Allies

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 12.—It is confirmed today that the operations of French, British, Netherlands and Belgian forces are directed by Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin.

From the moment the Germans entered the Low Countries close liaison was established between the separate national commands and the generalissimo. Neither the Hague nor Brussels would agree to preliminary staff conferences so long as they might hope that Berlin would respect their neutrality but obviously that did not prevent the French general staff, on its part, from elaborating plans to meet various contingencies including the present one.

Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON
President, Institute of Life Insurance

MRS. L. of Pittsburgh says: "My husband makes $2100 a year and we have two small children. We have $8000 in life insurance. Some of my friends think this is too much and others think it's too little. What do you think?"

I have other letters asking questions similar to this and wish that I could give an answer to fit all cases. Unfortunately there isn't any one "right" answer.

One of the reasons why we have life insurance agents in the place of selling life insurance in drugstores or over the counter is that each man's needs differ. For example, if Mrs. L. has or will inherit some money of her own, Mr. L.'s insurance needs might be far different from what they would be if she had to depend entirely on Mr. L.'s income.

If one of the children were an invalid so that it would require care as long as it lived, this would add another complication. If there are parents or other relatives who are likely to become dependent, the situation again changes. Furthermore, $2100 in Pittsburgh will buy quite a different amount of living from what it will buy in Augusta or Green Bay.

I could go on adding or changing conditions for one family for an hour, but you get the idea. The decision about how much insurance to buy simply has to be an individual decision.

Therefore, the only answer I can make to Mrs. L.'s question is a very general one. If her husband spent the amount of time on his insurance planning that its importance justifies, if he told his agent pretty exactly what he had in mind, what premiums he could afford and what the family needs were, he probably ended up with about the right kind and amount of insurance.

I WILL SAY THIS. If he is like most people, he probably has a little less than he ought to have. That is because there are so many irresistible things for sale in the stores these days—and only one man who actually gets out and sells the idea of thrift and protection to people in competition with these things. That—in case you haven't noticed—is your life insurance agent.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Swedes Order Full Blackout Over Country

Air Attack Feared; German Troopships Said Moving at Kiel

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, May 12.—German troopships were reported passing through the Kiel Canal tonight, and Sweden, suddenly alarmed, ordered a complete blackout of the whole country for an indefinite period, darkened the lighthouses on her east coast.

A min field had been laid in a section of the narrow Oresund Channel, near Malmo, which separates Sweden from German-occupied Denmark.

These precautions led to rumors that a sudden air attack is feared by Swedish authorities.

For a month Sweden was poised on the fringe of the Norwegian invasion, but breathed easier when the war suddenly turned toward the Netherlands and Belgium. It was assumed Germany would be occupied in that direction. Today, however, the press expressed general pessimism.

The government's blackout order included all areas not heretofore blacked out.

Nazi Landing Repulsed

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, May 12.—An official Norwegian statement said today that a "small German force had attempted a landing at an unspecified point in northern Norway, and travelers from Oslo reported the transport of troops from Germany to Norway had been suspended.

According to the Norwegian statement, German troops landed on the coast but were quickly surrounded. No further details were given. The statement suggested some German activity, however small, in that northern strip of territory where the Norwegian government still rules.

Transports Watched

In the reported suspension of sea transport of troops from Germany to Oslo, the Swedes were perhaps even more interested than the Norwegians, for Swedish authorities have lately kept an anxious watch on the frontier of those parts of Norway which are occupied by the Germans.

It was said in Oslo that all the German warships there had moved toward Germany and that many airplanes had flown southward the day after the march into Belgium and the Netherlands.

Expert observers here do not believe the British mines are so effective as to put an end to the movement of German transports in the Skagerrak and the Kattegat, and it was suggested that if the transport of reinforcements to Norway has stopped it might be because enough German troops are there now—far too many for the comfort of the Swedes.

Allies Gain Near Narvik

Meanwhile, the Allied campaign to wrest Narvik from the Germans appeared to be progressing slowly, holm newspaper Hufvudsadsbladet

The correspondent of the Stock- reported that the outcome of the Narvik fighting remains "questionable."

British atnd French forces are continuing their pressure on Narvik, small towns along the ore railroad the correspondent said, and the to the Swedish border have been evacuated.

Neutrality Held 'Dead Conception'

earlier in a dispatch from Washington, printed in La Nacion, which said consideration was being given to a new declaration of solidarity by the Americas which would scrap the declaration of neutrality at Panama for something resembling Italy's nonbelligerent status.

"Stronger Stand" Needed

The situation in which belligerents do not recognize the rights, as well as the duties, of neutrals, and the "aggressive methods" in Europe, Cantilo said, show the need for a "stronger stand" than neutrality.

He denied it would "mean bringing us nearer to war."

Disclosing that the first conversations on the subject were held April 19, when the possibility of an invasion of Belgium and Holland was discussed, Cantilo said some of the American republics were not favorable to a change then.

"But since the latest invasion with a wholesale disregard for international rules there appeared a growing demand among these nations for a new expression."

Neutrals cannot make "their neutrality respected as a juridicial form of their isolation," said Cantilo. "Neutrality, created to preserve sovereignty, either evades or diminishes it in present conditions, but does not protect it. It is a fiction, a dead conception, which must be replaced within the reality of the moment we are living."

Calls for Revision

Latin-American officials lately have shown dissatisfaction with results of the Declaration of Panama expressing neutrality, which the belligerents have not recognized, and are seeking some stronger means of maintaining nonbelligerent rights.

One high official said the "concept of neutrality which prevailed under international law has now disappeared."

"In the face of developments in Europe, including the invasion of Norway, Denmark and other neutrals, American nations should revise their neutrality and make it more flexible and more active. Without in any way entering the war, we should be able to proceed in accordance with our own convenience without feeling bound by the juridicial concept of neutrals."

500,000 Swiss Armed to Face Nazi Invasion

Large Movements Of German Troops Reported at Border

Basel, Switzerland, May 12.—Large troop movements in Germany north of Switzerland's frontier were reported by foreign military observers tonight, but whether they constituted a real threat or only a bluff remained a mystery.

In any case, the Swiss stood on war footing, with between 500,000 and 600,00 citizen soldiers mobilized and even Boy Scouts and aged women standing in rearguard posts.

The German troop movements observed in Baden, Wurttemberg and Bavaria were reported to involve even more than the 21 Army divisions reported concentrated in that area just before the German smash into the Low Countries. (Twenty-one divisions would number about 294,00 men.)

Some observers saw a possibility that Germany merely was holding her reserves in this region and moving in newly mobilized troops for training, but using them at the same time to force the Allies to keep part of their own reserves on the eastern Jura front instead of hurling them into Belgium and Holland.

However, if the massed divisions plan real action, their drive would start from a line between Basel and Lake Constance and sweep down through Switzerland toward Geneva and Lyon, flanking the Maginot Line, experts believed.

The Swiss generalissimo, Henri Guisan, not only called every able-bodied citizen between 20 and 60 to arms, but issued 40 bullets to every owner of a rifle who was not called and organized the Swiss to repulse parachute troops and crush possible fifth-column action.

60 Nazi Divisions In Low Countries

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 12.—The total force at the disposal of the German high command is estimated at 150 to 170 divisions. From six to ten are in Norway. The present offensive in the Low Countries seems to have been launched by some 60. There are consequently about 100 divisions held in reserve. The Dutch army has fewer than ten divisions; the Belgian between 18 and 20.

Allied Bombers Killed 40 Germans, Says U. S. Eyewitness

Railroad, Station Believed Objective Of Planes; French, Angered by Raids, Demand Reprisals by Their Forces

By George Axelsson

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 12.—An eyewitness of the Freiburg-in-Breisgau bombing, Wayne Chatfield Taylor, chief European delegate to the American Red Cross, said today he believes the casualty list has risen to 40 dead, in addition to some 150 injured.

Taylor says he obtained these figures from the Swiss consul just before leaving Freiburg and considers them accurate.

Taylor was on a north-bound train pulling into Freiburg station just as the bombers flew away. There was a squadron of three two-motored planes. Although they flew low, perhaps 2,000 feet, it was impossible to tell the make From the fact that one huge bombcrater was alongside the railroad track, about 400 yards from the rail station, Taylor admits the possibility that the objective might have been the station and the railroad line generally.

Found Border Closed

On the way to his Geneva post, Taylor arrived at the German-Swiss border Friday morning a few hours after the march into the Netherlands and Belgium had begun, only to find it closed. Despite his special passport, Taylor had to get out of the train at Weil, the last German station, where he was counseled to go to Freiburg and wait.

Taylor found the Freiburg population both angered and somewhat worried over the bombing. After staying overnight in Freiburg, the police notified him he could not stay. He chose to return to Berlin to await the reopening of the Swiss-German frontier.

There were new accusations of Allied bombing of unfortified objectives, for which Germany threatened to retaliate with five bombs for one.

The news agency D. N. B., quoting "responsible military quarters," said three civilians were killed when several French planes last night dropped bombs near the German town of Emmerich, on the Rhine near its crossing of the Dutch border.

It said that an operating theater of a military hospital was destroyed, but none of the sick and wounded soldiers was injured. Civilians, among them children, were said to have suffered in the "unorganized enemy raids on nonmilitary objectives."

Authorized sources claimed that the death toll in Freiburg had climbed above 50, with the injured numbering about 100.

Demand Allied Reprisals

Paris, May 12.—In all parts of France and especially in those districts of Lorraine, of the Rhone Valley, and near the German border which have, suffered air attacks, there is growing indignation at the German bombardments of civilians in France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. The demand, from all sides, is for Allied reprisals.

In most of the bombardments which took place in France, the objectives were air fields, it is true, but in almost every instance persons other than military formed the majority of victims. In the Netherlands and Belgium there has been even less attempt to confine attacks to military objectives, and Brussels as well as many other cities have suffered civilian casualties.

Refugees arriving in Paris today from Belgium told how roads were machine gunned by German aviators and, it is reported, a train carrying refugees from Liege to Brussels was bombarded.

Reports here tonight say nine cities in France suffered bombing raids yesterday and today. There were many alarms in northwest France. The total of known victims up to 6 o'clock Saturday night, the latest figures available, gives 148 killed and 337 wounded in air attacks on French cities.

Continuous Air Alarms

Nancy, France, May 12 (AP).—The population of Nancy remained almost continuously in air raid shelters today as alarm followed alarm.

Several points near Nancy were reported bombed but the city itself was not touched. Nancy suffered raids on Friday and Saturday.

Paris newspapers reported German planes dropped 100 bombs in the Nancy region yesterday.

The toll from Friday's bombing of Nancy was 22 dead and 40 injured, it was announced.

French to Treat Nazis in Allied Garb as Spies

Captured 'Chutists In False Uniform Are Ordered Shot

By the Associated Press

Paris, May 12.—Premier Reynaud charged today that Germany had used parachute troops wearing Dutch and Belgian uniforms in her invasion of the Low Countries and warned that any captured in France "not wearing their national uniform will be immediately shot."

A communique from Reynaud's office said:

"The French government declares publicly that all enemy combatants captured in France who are not wearing their national uniform will be immediately shot.

"The armed forces of the territory have received instruction to this effect."

Berlin Threatens Reprisal

Berlin, May 12 (AP).—Authoritative German sources warned the enemy today that every "ill-treatment of parachute soldiers and every act against them in violation of international law will result in prompt, sharpest counter-measures."

The German statement was issued, it was said, because enemy propaganda not only urges civilians to act against parachutists by every means possible, but also shows that "certain officials" are considering treating them as spies.

Authorities emphasized that parachute soldiers are regular troops of the German army, that the units were formed in peace time and have paraded before foreign military attaches.

They also stressed that they have a special uniform suited to their task and that it is in no way camouflaged.

To Act if Allies Enter Indies, Japanese Say

Tokyo Press Voices Alarm Over Dutch Pledge of Resources

By H. O. Thompson

United Press Staff Writer

Tokyo (Monday), May 13.—Newspapers warned the Netherlands today that any move to place the Dutch East Indies under allied "protection" would be followed by immediate action by Japan.

The landing of Allied troops at Aruba, Dutch West Indies, caused grave concern here where it was seen as possibly presaging a similar move in the East Indies.

Allied protection of the West Indies, it was recalled, was for the nominal purpose of protecting the big oil refineries at Aruba. The East Indies, too, are rich in petroleum, the newspaper Kokumin said, and the Allies easily might decide that "protection" also is necessary in this area.

Charge Pledge Was Broken

Asahi charged the Netherlands foreign office with repudiating its pledge of April 15 to Japan that the Dutch government never would entrust any country with the protection of the East Indies nor accept any offer of protection.

Kokumin believed this government will make new representations to the Netherlands and again request "assurances" that the status of the East Indies will not be changed.

Nichi Nichi said the Netherlands now is in alliance with Britain and France and that there no longer exsits any guarantee that British and French forces will not be landed in the East Indies.

"Under no circumstances," this newspaper said, "can Japan recognize any action by third countries which would bring about a change in the status of the East Indies upon which we depend for vital supplies and where we have important markets."

The declaration of the Netherlands foreign minister in London that the Netherlands government henceforth will place "all its resources at the disposal of the western powers," has caused great uneasiness in Japanese political circles, the Domei News Agency said.

The Nationalist Kokumin said the declaration is interpreted in official circles here to mean that "a fundamental change in the status quo of an important part of the Orient is envisaged."

British Won't Intervene

By the Associated Press

London, May 12.—An unofficial assurance was given today that the British would not intervene in the Netherlands East Indies.

(Both the United States and Japan have expressed their interest in maintenance of the status quo in the rich and strategic colonial possession of The Netherlands in the Far East.)

"His majesty's government," a British source said, "have previously expressed their interest in the maintenance of the status quo in the Netherlands East Indies.

"This attitude remains unchanged and they have no intention whatever of intervening in the East Indies nor has any suggestion been made from any quarter that they should do so."

Need No Aid, Loudon Says

The Netherlands East Indies, focus of world attention in the Far East since German invasion of the Netherlands, need no Allied support, Dr. A. Loudon, Dutch Minister to the United States, said in a radio address yesterday.

Dr. Loudon spoke over a national broadcasting chain less than an hour after he had talked by transatlantic telephone with his foreign office.

The wealthy East Indies Islands, source of the major portion of America's tin and rubber, established regulations "carefully prepared long ago," Dr. Loudon said, in case of an attack on the mother country.

Johnson Calls for Speedier Arms Output

By International News Service

Amarillo, Tex., May 12.—Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, today declared American industry must overcome a serious "time lag" in turning out military supplies to preclude successful aggression against the United States by "covetous" foreign powers.

Johnson, in a speech dedicating a veterans' hospital here, said this county "can and will face the world calmly, fairly and—if necessary—boldly." He declared:

"We covet no other nation's possessions. We make our bargains and we keep them. We are always willing to meet at the council table with any other people on any common issue. We insist, however, on the old Western custom that those who come to court check their guns outside."

Johnson said it was impossible to deal on equal terms "with those who wave their sabers in threatening gestures." He added:

"We threaten no one, nor do we fear anyone. We are not looking for trouble, but if anyone comes to trouble our shores, we are serving notice that we are bolstering our defenses."

Naming no nations, Johnson inveighed against powers which "not only covet their neighbors' belongings, but boldly cross their thresholds and seize their dearest possessions." He asked:

"Do you think that the covetous peoples who have put their faith in the sword are totally blind to our wealth and resources?

"The time factor in national defense must be licked. It is towards that objective that the War Department is now working.

"We must not be satisfied until we have on hand enough equipment to take care of our present forces and those who would be called to the colors in the first stages of battle, and until we have educated industry to keep the munitions rolling until victory is achieved."

Il Duce Joins 'Bait-Britain' Drive in Italy

Orders New Alpine Defenses; Posters Plaster All Rome

By Herbert Matthews

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, May 12.—The game of defying the Allies continued today with thousands more anti-British posters all over Rome and many little incidents to show that the young Fascists have been told to go out and bait the English. Even more pointed was a communique issued this afternoon.

"Mussolini, in the presence of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, chief of the army staff, and Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, undersecretary of war, today discussed military problems with Gen. Pietro Pintor and Gen. Guzzoni," the statement read. "The Duce instructed the two generals to perfect still further the defense of Italy's western Alpine frontiers."

Here again is an ostentatious gesture, which, like the report issued yesterday on the blockade, is intended to be irritating and defiant. It does not mean that Italy is going to war; in fact, it means nothing militarily speaking, since a prime requisite of strategy is secrecy, not advertisement. The true meaning is political; it is part of the new campaign to stir up feeling against the Allies and also, doubtless, to keep France and Britain on tenterhooks, thus aiding Germany.

Keeps Forces Immobilized

Already Italy's attitude has forced the Allies to send a large part of their fleet to the Mediterranean, where it is of no use in the western struggle. Now by this constantly threatening attitude the French are compelled to keep large forces immobilized on the Italian front. Thus without firing a shot the Italo-German military alliance is working to some purpose. Moreover, the Italians are sure the Allies can do nothing about it being completely tied up on the western front.

[In London, authoritative sources told the Associated Press the British Ambassador to Rome "had asked the Italian government for an explanation" of the assault on members of the British Embassy staff in Rome yesterday.

[It also was said that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador, had been "instructed by the government to draw attention of the Italian government to the unfortunate impression likely to be created by posters of an anti-British character."]

The putting up of posters went on all night again. It is one of the most thorough jobs of placarding ever done in Rome, where it not only includes virtually every house in town but even shop windows, buses and street cars. About 20,000 anti-British pamphlets were dropped from airplanes. The shopkeepers and owners of buildings can hardly like it, but they know perfectly well what forces are behind the aggressive youngsters who are going about plastering them up.

The emphasis is always on Britain, as if the Italians, like the Germans, still hoped to separate the Allies. Giovanni Ansaldo, for instance, writes an editorial this morning to demonstrate that the British maneuvered the invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands and sent only small forces to France, so that the French would have to do all their fighting for them.

Vatican Papers Burned

Rome, May 12 (AP).—A woman who defaced an anti-British poster in the Piazza San Silvestro was reported by bystanders to have been manhandled by a crowd tonight as Fascists continued to make plain their displeasure with the British.

There also were several incidents in which copies of the Vatican City newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, which reported Pope Pius' messages of support to the rulers of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, were snatched from the hands of Italians reading them. Blackshirt Fascist groups did the snatching.

One purchaser of L'Osservatore was said by spectators to have been ducked in the famous Trevi Fountain.

Students also seized copies of the Vatican paper from news stands in railroad stations and burned them, and took the copies away from venders.

A small pro-German demonstration by students occurred in Rome yesterday, and more anti-British posters appeared on the walls of the city.

In a lighter vein, was the line scrawled on one such poster which was headed, "England missed the bus."

Gen. Drum Gets Medal From Notre Dame

New York, May 12.—The United States Army was extolled as a force that has "never marched against liberty nor ever retreated before tyranny" today in a University of Notre Dame citation of Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding officer of the First Army and the Second Corps Area. Gen. Drum received the university's Laetare Medal.

Old Age Policy Pays up to $50 a Month!

Needed Protection, Ages 65 to 85, Costs Only 1 Cent a Day

Returning Soldier Greets His Son

practicable only in the laboratory, not in field operations.

He pointed out that such a gas, resembling known anesthetics, must be used in a confined space and in a high concentration. Regarding the reported description of the "nerve gas" as having a faint smell similar to a geranium, he said that both lewisite and phosgene have this characteristic odor.

A Boston chemist last night told the Associated Press that he believes it entirely possible that chemists may have produced "some volatile liquid which, when dispersed from a bomb, would be capable of producing partial anesthesia in men who inhaled it."

A chemical with similar effects was discussed at a meeting of the American Chemical Society two years ago. It is acetyl choline, a compound present in the human body in extremely minute amounts.

This form of acetyl choline, which would make a soldier unconscious for as much as an hour, requires direct contact of the liquid with some sort of wound or break in the skin. No method was suggested by which the chemical would be effective when inhaled.

Army men and military attaches here were inclined to accept the statements of the German high command, which, in contrast with official news agency reports, have proven accurate in the past. The high command's bulletin stated that the Eben Emael fort was taken in 36 hours.

Garrison Held in Check

The bulletin indicated that a small air detachment "silenced" the fort and held the garrison in check, remaining somewhere about the fort until land forces on the outside could break through. It stated that the airmen employed a "new means of attack," but queries by newspapermen brought refusals to expand upon this crucial phrase.

It is known that the fortress is a high-walled block of masonry, about a mile in circumference with an open court perhaps 600 to 800 yards in diameter.

Jacques de Thier, first secretary of the Belgian Embassy, told The Post that he may receive an official report concerning the fort's capture from the Belgian government today. In the meanwhile, he said, the reported "new weapon" has dominated discussion at the Embassy. He added:

"Like everybody, we are wondering what it may be. We don't know what it is, but we are anxious about it. Two possibilities have occurred to us. It may be an immobilizer, some kind of gas that makes soldiers like dead people. Or, it may be some new, very strong bomb."

Col. R. V. Read, British military attache, said he had few doubts about the matter.

Propaganda Angle

"The world is full of surprises," he said. "Anything is possible. But I believe the 'new weapon' is just the old one, propaganda. It is a continuance of the war of nerves—an attempt to frighten the Belgian people."

Col. Dumitru Petrescu, Rumanian military attache, thought the "propaganda" theory more than a possibility. For the Germans to attack and hold the fort in the manner described by the high command, seems, he said, "like a miracle—or else they are boasting."

"The Germans," he said, "boasted of a new weapon before. This turned out to be the magnetic mine—an old weapon. In the same way this may have been done with known arms, through a remarkable coordination of parachute troops and land forces."

Capt. J. E. M. Ranneft, Dutch naval attache, said that an air bombardment with a new powerful explosive might have turned the trick. But he pointed out that explosives more powerful than those now in use would be very difficult to handle.

Yugoslavs Urge Balkans Join Soviet Trade Pact

Belgrade, May 12 (AP).—A Yugoslav proposal for economic cooperation with Soviet Russia by the four powers of the Balkan Entente was reported today, authoritative quarters said the project would be given close study when experts of the Entente members—Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey—meet at an economic conference here May 27.

Yugoslavia, counting on political and military understandings with Russia to follow the trade agreement signed at Moscow last night, was reported to have urged the Entente partners to take all possible steps toward making the Balkans economically self-sufficient with Soviet support.

Capper Urges U. S. Develop Rubber Sources in Brazil

By the Associated Press

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, suggested yesterday that the United States use some of its gold to develop the rubber industry in Brazil.

In an address prepared for broadcasting, the Senator discussed the possibility of European war developments shutting off United States' access to essential stocks such as rubber and tin from the Dutch East Indies.

"We would be better off if we were getting our rubber from Brazil than to have to continue to depend on the Dutch East Indies," he said.

If either Germany or Japan attempted to seize those island, Capper predicted, Britain undoubtedly would call upon the United States to send the Pacific fleet to protect British rubber interests there.

Dutch Clean Up 'Fifth Columns'

large sections of Rotterdam were extinguished.

Although there were ten air raid alarms in Amsterdam up to 6 p. m. yesterday there were no bombings. However, firing broke out in several sections as soldiers searched houses for parachute troops or "Fifth Columnists."

Hundreds of persons were seized in Amsterdam, and the high command announced that every house from which shots are fired will be smashed to pieces with shells.

Saturday night and again Sunday everyone on Amsterdam streets was stopped. During one parachute troop alarm, no civilians were permitted in the open for hours while a search was made.

It was reported that Germans, disguised in the flowing black robes and flat hats of Dutch clergymen, had entered Amsterdam in a car.

Hague Putsch Fails

In The Hague, things were quiet after a Saturday of havoc from traitorous German-Hollanders who first tried and failed to seize a police station, sniped from housetops at Dutch soldiers and then tried to march to the center of the city.

The way the Dutch smashed this putsch is best told in the words of a Saturday midnight communique:

"Some Germans living in The Hague tried today to advance to the center of the city, starting from a house in the Suez Kade, (lower bank of the Afvoer Canal in the southern part of the city). A detachment of Dutch troops drove them back to the Suez Kade, where they lodged themselves again in the house aforementioned.

"One of our armored cars shelled this house, after which the Germans who were not killed surrendered.

British Help

"The commander-in-chief of the army and navy has announced that the same measures will be taken against every house from which shots are fired against the Dutch people."

At Rotterdam, where heavy fighting has been going on in the streets since German troops were landed by seaplane and parachute early Friday, the situation was clouded by the lack of direct communication. But the Dutch, with the help of the British Royal Air Force, especially in bombing Waalhaven airdrome south of the city, seemed to think they had things in hand.

The nation called to the colors additional civil guards—older army classes subject to duty only in wartime.

Letters Stopped

An appeal for economy in the use of drinking water was broadcast, because of "trouble" at the Amsterdam waterworks.

To facilitate the "fifth column" cleanup, all internal communications—telephones, letters and telegrams—were stopped.

At one large building, police climbed to the roof and shot a man who had signaled enemy planes.

All important buildings were under heavy guard.

Steel Organizing Committee May Amalgamate

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said tonight a proposal to dissolve the S. W. O. C. and merge its members with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers would be placed before the S. W. O. C. convention here Tuesday. Both are C. I. O. affiliates.

The merger, he said, had already been submitted to the convention of the Amalgamated Association at Pittsburgh. Under the plan, the S. W. O. C. would dissolve in favor of a new union which then would be merged with the Amalgamated.

Each convention is expected to appoint a negotiating committee to draw up final details if the delegates of the two organizations approve the combine, Murray reported.

The S. W. O. C. has been organizing the steel industry since June, 1936, under an agreement with the Amalgamated.

some 11,000 others were affected.

Scotland Yard began rounding up the aliens yesterday morning.

With the public expressing solid approval of the new cabinet and relief that governmental troubles were over, Prime Minister Churchill went to Buckingham Palace to be sworn in. With him went his new war cabinet and fighting service chieftains to take their oaths.

In cabinet appointments announced yesterday, Churchill sent the veteran Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, to the House of Lords as lord chancellor, replacing Viscount Caldecote.

Sir John's appointment necessitates his retirement from the House of Commons and acceptance of a peerage.

Alfred Duff Cooper, Nazi-hating former first lord of the admiralty who left the cabinet after the Munich appeasement, was named minister of information to replace Sir John Reith.

Sir Kingsley Wood, who had been air minister and then lord privy seal, was named chancellor of the exchequer to replace Sir John Simon.

Laborite Herbert Morrison, leader of the London County Council, was made minister of supply, replacing Leslie Burgin, who organized the department, which was instituted just before the outbreak of the war.

Lord Lloyd, 60-year-old expert on foreign affairs, was named colonial secretary, replacing Malcolm MacDonald, who is being mentioned for appointment as food minister.

Sir John Anderson was reappointed home secretary and Sir Andrew Duncan was reappointed president of the Board of Trade. Several appointments such as postmaster general and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster remain to be filled.

British Sub Given Up

Copyright by New York Times

London, May 12.—The mine-laying submarine, Seal, 1,500 tons, is overdue and must be presumed lost. Making this announcement today the admiralty said: "Foreign reports suggest that some of her crew may be prisoners of war."

It is thought that the Seal may be the submarine which the Germans claimed last week to have been captured and taken in tow after striking a mine off the Swedish coast.

Senators Oppose Plan for War Loans

"This is exactly what a lot of decent citizens, and others not so disinterested, are advocating."

"If we want to get into this war," Johnson said, "the way to do it is by making large credits and loans to those already in it."

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, the only remaining member of the Senate who voted against America's participation in the World War but who supported the Administration in its successful fight to repeal the mandatory arms embargo of the Neutrality Act, agreed with Johnson.

"I don't see any reason to make any change," he said. "There is no use even to talk about it."

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, vehement critic of totalitarian doctrines, said the United States should express its full sympathy with the Allies, but did not know whether this expression should go to the length of modifying the Johnson Act.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, would not comment but he does not believe any more to relax pending restrictions would succeed.

"They don't need our money," said Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. "I am unalterably opposed to any repeal or modification of the law at this time."

Dutch Fighting Like Men Foredoomed, Refugees Say

By the Associated Press

London, May 12.—Heroic stories of Holland's grim fight against German invaders were told by refugees arriving at a British port today.

"Every man and every woman in Holland will fight and fight until they drop," declared a woman who witnessed Friday's assault on Rotterdam.

"I saw them crying, but they were tears of rage and not of terror. The Dutch aren't despairing. They got past that."

A British seaman said the Dutch were fighting "like men who know they must die, but in dying will take with them ten of the enemy. They are fighting on the assumption that every Dutchman must fight until he is killed, and that after that the Dutch women must fight."

The arrivals said the sky over and around Rotterdam literally swarmed with German planes and parachutists, who poured into the city and made every street corner a battlefield. They declared that some of the parachutists wore civilian clothes.

Many children were among the refugees. They were battened below decks during the voyage. The ship was bombed and machine-gunned on the way but escaped damage.

An English woman gave a graphic description of the fight for a bridge over the Maas River in Rotterdam.

"The Nazis held one bank of the Maas and a bridge. A Dutch ship came up and fired 30 rounds at the bridge, setting it afire. The ship was hit and retired but came back soon and again drove the Nazis from the bridge as bombers roared overhead.

"Dutch civilians were in the fighting now, and they were vicious. When they finally took the bridges there were no Nazis alive."

Theater Hand Dies At Loading Job

John A. Daugherty, 60, of Absecon, N. J., died yesterday shortly after supervising loading of scenery of "The Louisiana Purchase," which closed Saturday at the National Theater. Police said death was apparently due to heart trouble.

Daugherty was directing loading at the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal when he collapsed. He was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

War Mothers Express Hope No More Sons Will Be Slain

In memory of American men killed overseas in the other World War, American War Mothers held Mother's Day ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Mrs. Robert Eugene Ridenhour, of Concord, N. C., national president of the War Mothers, places a wreath on the tomb ered in Arlington Amphitheater for the service, which combined a Mother's Day tribute with a patriotic observance. Among the scores of war mothers were many whose sons did not return from the World War.

Mrs. Robert E. Ridenhour, national president of the American War Mothers, said that some soldiers who did come back "were broken in body and spirit, and are at this moment in Government hospitals and institutions.

"To their mothers, wives and children, the World War is still a living reality. They were sure they were going to fight for peace. Alas, there is no peace.

"My prayer is that our sons and grandsons and greatgrandsons will never be called on to take up arms."

In a delegation of a dozen war mothers from York, Pa., were four whose sons died in the World War. Mrs. Sarah Rebecca Bair lost one of her three soldier sons. Now she has a grandson 26 years old.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ringland, also of York, lost her older son, who died in camp in this country, just before he was to go overseas. Since the war, her younger son has died. "I don't have any boys now who would have to go to another war, but I don't want any other mothers' boys to go," she said.

Marine Band Plays

The service was held under a bright sky, with sunlight falling on the dozens of American flags, and with the Marine Band playing. Songs were sung by Mrs. H. Grady Gibson, of Concord, N. C., daughter of the War Mothers' president; Mrs. J. Nick Sloan, Charlotte, N. C., and the Virginians, a male quartet. Edward Masters, of the Marine Band, played a cornet solo, "Roses of Picardy." Chaplain W. H. Rafferty, of the Navy, gave the invocation and Chaplain A. C. Oliver, of the Army, the benediction.

After the services in the amphitheater, the crowd reassembled at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier where 38 wreaths were laid by groups of War Mothers and other patriotic units.

Representative Kee (Democrat), of West Virginia, spoke on "Motherhood" at the Mother's Day and Founder's Day program of Opportunity House yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Frances Craven, mother of Mrs. Robert Horner, one of its directors, was the special honor guest to whom flowers were presented by Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker, chairman of the event.

Jewish Celebration

About 100 friends and members of Opportunity House attended the program, which included vocal solos by Mrs. Ida Wood and Miss Anne Monson, and readings by Mrs. Hester B. Provenson.

Among numerous other Mother's Day observances here, girls' clubs of the Jewish Community Center had a celebration to which mothers and grandmothers were invited. The Nitania Club sang Hebrew songs and the Habonim girls presented folk dances. Beatrice Brotman served as general chairman and Janice Slugman as mistress of ceremonies for the program which brought approximately 200 persons.

Earlier in the afternoon Troop 73, Boy Scouts, held its annual award day exercises and Mother's Day celebration at the Jewish Community Center. A number of mothers were present to see their sons receive awards.

Members of six sororities honored their mothers at parties yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. They were Pi Sigma Tau, Chi Sigma, Alpha Lambda Phi, Nu Omega Chi, Phi Gamma Phi and Tau Beta Sigma.

Mothers of American University students were invited to a special campus program yesterday.

"LOUISIANA PURCHASE" tunes will be given their first night spot airing today by Dick Koon's Orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge. The music was own to Washington over the week-end and put into immediate rehearsal. So this afternoon and eve you can hear "Tomorrow is a Lovely Day," "You're Lonley and I'm Lonely," and the rest of these dazzling new Berlin tunes that are bound for the top of the hit parade . . . But Arthur Todd of the King Cole Room heard all of the "Louisiana Purchase" score many weeks ago. Irving Berlin composed it at Nassau last winter while Aurthur was playing at the Nassau Bahamians' Club. A preview of the tunes was attended by a verra selective group including S. N. Behrman, Billy Gaxton, Billy Seeman and Arthur.

JACK O'BRIEN'S FLAGSHIP BAND. That's the new name of the Flagship orchestra, newly headed by "Buff" Amorosi, one of the town's best rhythm experts. Also new is Jack Schaeffer (former Harry James' band), trumpeter, singer, dancer and high-test clown. An extra saxophonist will be added, too.

NEW CARLTON DIVERSIONS. Pianist-accordionist Irving Devron and Helen Myers, who's fresh from Hollywood, will make their debut in the Carlton cocktail lounge today, plaything from 5 to 7 in the afternoon and 9:30 to 11:30 in the evening. Miss Myers plays iolin and piano and has been with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer both as accompanist and composer. She did the scores for seeral of the MacDonald-Eddy shows.

ROOF GARDENS. The Hotel Washington's roof garden, always a lovely place, has just reopened. Pedro De Leon's string quartet will play from 5 to 8 p. m., and 10:30 to 12:30 in the evening. . . . The Powhatan Roof of the Roger Smith Hotel will open May 31. There'll probably be a big Manhattan dance band. Cover charges will be abolished in favor of a low minimum . . . And you'd better go to the Roger Smith's Cafe Caprice, while there's time, and hear Al Dary sing about that strange maiden, "Natasha."

CURRENT SHOWS. Troika. An exuberant all-new show for this last week at the air-conditioned Troika. Dagger dancing by Yasha, a barefoot conga by Mara, songs by Lee Kerry and Basso Deloff, superb violin solos by Sasha Lukas, a "Boyer Dance" by Lola and Vanya.

Shoreham. Francita, the "radium girl" is held over again, also singers Doraine and Ellis. Dancers Harland and Hart make their bow tonight.

Lotus. The Jeanette Hackett Girls and Dancers St. Clair and Durand arrive today. Tommy Tucker who can make sounds like anything from a trumpeting elephant to a buzzing mosquito, remains over.

Casino Royal. The Dance Cock tails are held over. Harry White's clowning doggies and the Rexes, dancers, will be new. The Virginia Manch Girls, originally booked, were delayed and wont show up until next week.

SUMMERTIME IN RIVIERA. The Lounge Riviera will hold its "summer opening" tonight. That makes summer official. Pete Macias and the boys will be wearing their new warm weather uniforms, singing lotsa warm weather songs. Gala by the gallon. We think we're talking about those gala-sized beverages served at Riviera.

REVELATORY SCRIBBLES. Guy Richardson, handwriting expert of the Rainbow Room, says that a comparison of the writing of engaged couples will show whether they're likely to get along. So take your fiance up to the Rainbow Room, girls. But don't tell him why . . . Guy says that our paragraph about insanity showing in handwriting brought in a bunch of folks who wanted to find out their mental condition. "Bt none of them were really nuts," he added. "Usually they were just in love."

GLENN MILLER, who will bring his dance orchestra to Riverside Stadium Thursday night

CELEBRITIES' NEST. Mayfair's Lyle Smith puts forward his hometown high school at Bloomington, Ill., as a prize producer of notables. Among the Bloomington high schoolers who've attained prominence are Judge Fay Bentley, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, Paul Rhymer, who created radio's Vic and Sade, and Artress Irene Del Roy. And that fine music maker, Lyle Smith.

ABOUT MELODY ACES. Joe Garbleman, trumpeter with Paul Kain's Glen Echo band, is one-half of a technical Siamese twin. He was separated from his twin shortly after birth . . . Jat Herod, star violinist of the Robin Hood, was due to come to the Troika as band leader a season or two ago. But something came up and he couldn't make it. He's played at the White House and with Walter Damrosch . . . Don Bestor, now in the Metronome Room, has played six engagements in the Capitol and Earle Theaters. And it looks as though all of his former theater audiences are trying to come in and greet him.

ANCHOR ROOM'S Matt Windsor was the featured organist on old WAHG in New York, one of the first radio stations in the country . . . Los Cuatros Caballeros are registering a smackeroo hit at the Madrillon . . . Frank Ramon, the hi hat violinist, can play any Noel Coward tune you can recall—and beautifully.

PALL MALL PRESIDENTIAL RACE. Hobby horses in the nightly Pall Mall Room races will carry the colors and names of leading Presidential candidates. If you want to see any candidate take a tumble, here's your spot.

NEPTUNE PICTURE. George Howard of "The King's Jesters." He was stopping over on the way to Virginia Beach . . . Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Lurba, both looking very happy now that Mr. Lurba is over that long seige of illness . . . Singer Earline King very chic in a fuchsia colored cape . . . Bill Levy, the drinkables expert, receiving congratulations on his new "Preakness Cocktail," but already planning another beverage coup. We hear that Neptune broke all records for big business last month.

ART GALLERIES. Dick's Grill is lined with signed pictures of stage stars and maestros. They all visit when they're in town . . . Amusing circus murals decorate the Harrington Tavern. You'll love the daring young ladies on the flying trapezes.

Station PDS Presents Hardy and Cochran

The two young men you see here play the guitar. They are Hardy and Cochran, of Washington, D. C. Hardy and Cochran also have a "Hill Billy Band" consisting of fiddle, banjo and two guitars. Maybe you have heard these two young men before as they play for parties, dances and on the stage. If not just tune in on Station WMAL this morning on the PDS program and listen to them

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Farley Proclaims Roosevelt Friend Of Negro People

Detroit, May 12 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley said in an address here today that the Negro had rendered "indispensable aid in restoring liberal government once more to the American people."

"It was with his important help that this Nation put into the White House a new leader of liberalism," he declared. "That man and his wife, Eleanor Roosevelt, a great American in her own right, have indeed often proven themselves the friend of the Negro."

Farley spoke at an exposition depicting 75 years of Negro progress.

Denatured Alcohol Blamed in Fire

Drinking denatured alcohol was indirectly blamed yesterday for the serious condition of a transient taken to Casualty Hospital after burns received when his clothing caught fire.

Police said the victim, John E. Gupton, no fixed address, went to some woods near the Baltimore & Ohio roundhouse with a colored man where the two consumed a quart of denatured alcohol. Apparently the alcohol did not provide enough body heat and the pair later built a fire which somehow ignited Gupton's clothes.

Holdup Too Vivid, 'Victim' Admits It's All a Hoax

A man who had told police a colorful story of how he had been bound, gagged and robbed in his downtown hotel room yesterday confessed to police after long questioning that it was all a fairy tale.

Police said the robbery "victim" gave a Roanoke, Va., address.

On Saturday night, the man told police two white men seized him as he was entering his hotel room. After taking $420 in bills and other valuables from his person, the "victim" said, the men bound and gagged him.

In a signed confession to Captain of Detectives Ira Keck, the man gave no reason for making up the story, which police described as full of minute details even to the description of the nonexistent robbers.

1,000 Masons Help Dedicate New Temple

Scottish Rite Home Is Consecrated to 'Truth and Knowledge'

Dedication of the stately new Scottish Rite Temple at 2800 Sixteenth street northwest yesterday brought more than 1,000 Masons to the ceremony of elaborate ritual conducted by the Sovereign Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Southern Juridiction, John H. Cowles, and other leaders of the order in this vicinity.

Assisting the sovereign grand commander were Deputy Charles Cyrus Coombs and officers of the coordinate bodies of the rite in the Valley of Washington. They included the Rev. Dr. John C. Palmer, primate; Secretary Arthur B. Hayes; Donald W. Graffius, venerable master of Mithras Lodge of Perfection; John Hess, commander of Robert de Bruce Council; Marvin E. Fowler, wise master of Evangelist Chapter, Knights Rose Croix; Treasurer Monie Sanger; Frank E. Koch, captain of the Scottish Rite Guard, and Frank Stetson, chairman of the building committee.

With its structure including some of the largest single stones ever used in building in this area, the debt-free home of four coordinate bodies of the Scottish Rite symbolizes simplicity, strength and beauty. Each of the Stones is nine feet square and weights approximately six tons.

Built Like Amphitheater

The auditorium is built like an amphitheater with a well equipped stage having a proscenium arch 29 feet in width and 21 feet high. On the third floor of the structure is the Blue Lodge Room to be used by the Albert Pike Blue Lodge, F. A. A. M. Game rooms provide the building with club facilities.

Consecrated yesterday by Sovereign Grand Commander Cowles to "the dissemination of truth and knowledge, to the service of peace and toleration and to the virtues of hospitality and good faith," the temple will be used Monday through Friday of this week at 8 p. m. for the degree work of approximately 75 men.

The Scottish Rite Choir sang Gounod's anthem, "Unfold, Ye Portals," in the ceremonies.

Distinguished guests from other Masonic orders attending the dedication service included Needham C. Turnage, grand master of Masons, and officials of the Grand Lodge; Herbert C. Cave, grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and other officers of the Grand Chapter; Robert L. Comer, grand master of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of the District, and officers of the Grand Council; J. Fred Huber, grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar in the District, and officers of the Grand Commandery; Karl E. Jarrell, potentate of Almas Temple, ancient Arabic order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, and his divan; C. Walter Umhau, monarch of Kallipolis Grotto, and his grand officers.

Congress Represented

Among numerous representatives from Capital Hill attending were Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachustets, and Representative Sol Bloom, of New York.

Next Sunday at 2:30 p. m. dedication services of the new pipe organ will be held with six noted Washington organists playing in the recital. The organ is presented by W. R. Frank Hines as a memorial to his father, the late Stephen H. Hines.

Open house on apportioned nights will be held during the week of May 20 for Masons of the District and vicinity and their wives.

Mrs. L. L. Eckloff Dies at Age of 78

The Federal Diary:

Employe Relations Plan Near

By Edward Ryan

A year-old drive to find standard methods of handling employe grievances in Government agencies is nearing completion in offices of the Civil Service Commission and the Council of Personnel Administration. The commission's final draft of uniform principles for employe relations has gone over to the council for study by personnel directors, who are expected to pass on it in their next meeting, officials said.

A hint of what the new program will call for has been given to the Ellender committee in the form of a six-point statement drawn up by members of the council during the first stages of the survey.

They listed these points:

1. Concentrate responsibility for employe relations in the hands of a single department executive.
2. Put your employe relations policy in writing and make it known to every one in the organization.
3. Recognige the responsibility of supervisors to hear "promtply and courteously" the suggestions and grievances of workers.
4. Establish a definite procedure for handling all questions about grievances, with channels of appeal to the highest executives.
5. Recognize the right of employes to organize in associations or unions of their own choosing.
6. Consult employes and supervisors before rather than after, decisions which affect their own interest.

Publication of the uniform policy, officials said, will clear the way for personnel directors to submit their appeals programs to the Civil Service Commission for approval.

With the President's order of June, 1938, setting up their offices, the personnel men were given word to set up machinery for hearing grievances, subject to approval by the agency head and the Commission. Five agencies sent their plans up to the Commission, but the latter decided that before the work went further the uniform policy should be defined.

Chairman Ellender, of the Senate committee investigating the Civil Service, has told the personnel directors that the council should get the uniform program ready at an "early date," and he was told it would be done immediately.

Ellender will hold his second quiz of the personnel directors at 10 a. m. today.

A pumpkin that fits the pie is the latest triumph announced by the Agriculture Department. Their new pumpkin, grown at Cheyenne, Wyo., is two to four inches long, and five to seven inches around. Officials hinted it would be a boon to housewives who make pumpkin pies one at a time.

Government officials and the National Small Businessmen's Association have come up with different scores on the Federal checking account.

The association reported the Federal Government month makes out checks for more than 12,400,000 individuals throughout the country.

"This monthly pay roll, including all forms of pensions and public assistance (except 1,700,000 direct relief cases supported by other public funds) amounted to $509,000,000 for January, 1940, or at the rate of approximately $6,100,000,000 a year," the report said.

Among their figures, the association reported that 285,744 persons in January received $16,600,000 in Social Security death claims. Officials of the Social Security Board said their death claim payments from January, 1937, to March, 1940, had totaled $17,630,000 to 283,000 persons.

Also listed in the Association's report on "the entire Federal pay roll," were these payments: $38,500,000 in old age assistance to 1,925,957 persons; $1,100,000 in aid to the blind for 46,087 persons; $10,100,000 to 753,705 dependent children. Social Security officials said the Federal Government had paid half of these totals, with the rest contributed by State and local governments.

Dr. W. S. Ufford, 81, Falls Dead Driving Auto

Former Charities Aide Believed Stricken By Heart Attack

Dr. Walter S. Ufford, Congregational minister, teacher and social worker, who was secretary of the Associated Charities for a quarter-century, died suddenly last night in his automobile as he prepared to take his family for a short drive. He was 81.

His body, slumped behind the wheel, was found by Mrs. Ufford and her sister, Miss Rosa Brown, when they emerged from the house. He had backed the car from the garage at his home, 1940 Biltmore street northwest.

He is believed to have suffered a heart attack. Mrs. Ufford said that he showed no signs of illness when he left the house.

An early advocate of governmental relief expenditures, he had predicted that private groups would be unable to carry the burden of increased need, growing out of the depression. He led the first committee on unemployed in the District and worked to get Frederic A. Delano as chairman.

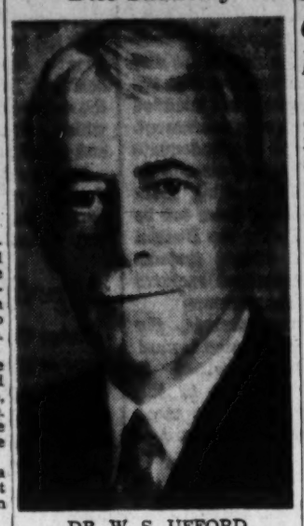
His service to the District includes:

Membership on the District Commission on Public Welfare Legislation from 1924 to 1926 that brought about the mothers' aid law and the Board of Public Welfare. Organization of the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, which he served as secretary for many years.

Introduction of the health program in the city's public schools. Organization of the Social Service Exchange, now a part of the Council of Social Agencies, and its Christmas opportunity plan. Establishment of the Charities Indorsement Committee and the Children's Council.

Under his leadership, the Council of Social Agencies was established.

Dies Suddenly



DR. W. S. UFFORD

He was a prime mover in the organization of the Community Chest. During the World War he was director of the Institutes for the Red Cross Home Service Workers.

He retired as secretary of the Associated Charities in 1934 only to devote his energies to the struggle for greater relief funds.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., he attended Amherst College, the Yale Divinity School, Andover Theological Seminary and Columbia University. He received a doctor of philosophy degree at Columbia in 1897.

He taught at Cheltenham Military Academy, near Philadelphia, from 1882 to 1886, was acting principal in 1888 and 1889. Ordained in 1891, he was pastor of one of New York's largest churches, Trinity, from 1891 to 1894. From 1898 to 1902 he was superintendent of inspection of the New York State Board of Charities. From 1902 to 1907 he was general secretary of the Federated Charities of Baltimore.

The Record

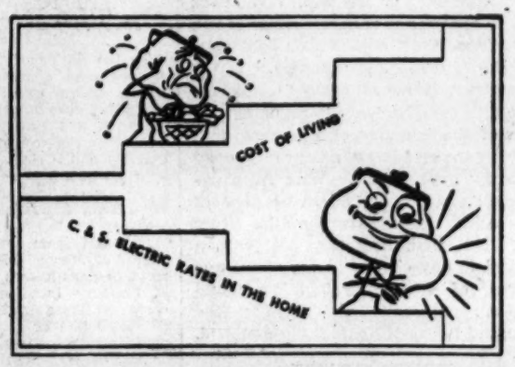
for LOW Rates and MORE Electric Service

LOWER RATES

The average rate for electric service in all homes in the United States during the year 1939 was ..... 4.00c* PER KILOWATT HOUR

Commonwealth & Southern's average rate for electric service in the home for the first three months of 1940 was .... 2.93c PER KILOWATT HOUR

Our average electric rate for homes has long been about 25% BELOW the national average



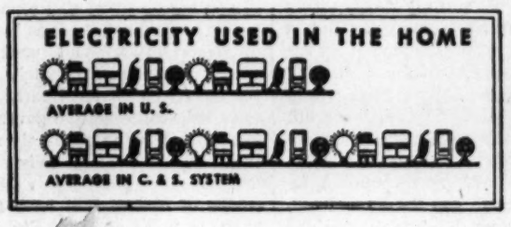
Ever since the Commonwealth & Southern system was formed, eleven years ago, we have steadily reduced rates. This has been accomplished in the face of rising costs in living, and despite steadily mounting costs of labor and materials, and despite ever increasing taxes which we pay to Local, State and Federal governments.

AND MORE USE

The average home use of electricity throughout the United States during the year 1939 was ..... 897* KILOWATT HOURS

In Commonwealth & Southern system, the average home use of electricity for the 12 months ended March 1940 was ... 1226 KILOWATT HOURS

The average use in homes served by us has long been about 35% ABOVE the national average



With the formation of our System, we began an aggressive policy of encouraging wider use of electric appliances for labor saving and more conveniences in the home. We made them easy to own.

Our Companies have been producing progressively larger quantities of electricity and have been making it available at progressively lower rates for many years.

We thus help to make the American standard of living the highest in the world and help to lighten the work of housewives in an ever growing number of American homes.

Aid For Gallinger

The Senate Appropriations Committee is to be congratulated on the improvements for Gallinger Hospital provided in the District supply bill. The measure, expected on the Senate floor today, carries $39,620 more for the hospital than the House allowed. This sum would add 24 employes—10 nurses, 10 attendants and 4 laboratory technicians.

An examination of needs indicates that, even with this welcome supplement, Gallinger's personnel would be below accepted standards in number. On the basis of a study made in New York hospitals and recognized as a criterion for hospital management, Gallinger needs 70 head nurses. The supply bill provides 21. In this respect the bill leaves Gallinger sadly deficient, but it would provide an ample number of graduate nurses and ward attendants.

Judging from the experience of Veterans' Administration hospitals, 13 or more technicians are needed at Gallinger compared with the 11 envisioned, and 93 workers are needed in dietetic service to 60 allowed. Gallinger has the second highest patient load per employe among 13 hospitals surveyed in various cities.

The appropriation requested of the Senate certainly appears to be a minimum. It cannot be reduced without inflicting great hardship and injustice on both the employes and patients at Gallinger.

Unfortunate Deadlock

If the McGehee bill to liberalize the District Unemployment Compensation Act fails of passage, it will be difficult to avoid the conclusion that representatives of local business and trade-union groups are responsible for the deadlock. Agreements are reported to have been reached in the House District Committee upon all save one of the controversial issues involved. A compromise that would speed the bill toward final passage is surely possible if both employers and labor leaders really want action.

Evidently the proposed changes in the present law do not entirely satisfy either employer or employe groups. But a compromise bill, affording temporary relief, could be passed without denying either side an opportunity to try again to secure a better deal. The McGehee bill would relieve the employers of an estimated $1,000,000 of taxes and bring levies into line with those imposed by most of the States. On the other hand, insured workers would on the whole obtain greater benefits. Since the District reserve fund is piling up at a rapid rate, immediate tax relief for employers would not in the least jeopardize the claims of labor for subsequent greater liberalization of benefits.

It seems extraordinarily shortsighted for those concerned to refuse to take what they can get in the way of concessions at the present time just because they are unable to obtain all they desire.

Give It A Chance

The prospect that "District day" in the House may be given over to debate of the Rankin pensions bill is very discouraging. Several local groups and some members of Congress have worked for years to bring a bill for reorganization of the District government to the floor of the House. Today the bill written for that purpose may fail because a majority of House members want to prove that they are amenable to the demands of World War veterans just before an election.

If the House spends the day considering this proposed pension grab, it will be under special obligation to set aside another day this week for presentation of local bills. Particularly the reorganization bill should not be allowed to fail for want of an opportunity to debate it on the floor. Unless this bill can be enacted by both houses of Congress before adjournment, it will be a dead letter and the reorganization movement will suffer another disconcerting setback.

One other cogent argument against delay in passing this measure is the fact that its sponsor, Representative Ambrose Kennedy, will not be in Congress next year. His defeat in the Maryland Democratic primary will remove from the District Committee the most active advocate of a modernized government for Washington.

It is true that the bill has some opposition and many District residents are disappointed because its reforms are so restricted. But the measure is not intended to give Washington a new government. It would merely improve the inadequate system of municipal control already in operation here. While awaiting more comprehensive adjustments, there can be no valid objection to giving the District modern personnel and budget systems and reorganizing its haphazard agencies into more closely knit departments.

So, with all its shortcomings, the Kennedy bill is a reasonable step toward better government in the District. It should command the attention of the House while there is still time to complete its enactment before Congress adjourns.

One-Party Handicap

Both the Democratic and Republican Parties have within their ranks large numbers of men and women to whom party labels mean more than political issues. Their allegiance, based on sentiment, habit or sometimes expediency, triumphs over any aversion they may feel for the character of the party leadership or the policies which have been indorsed.

There are, for instance, members of the House and Senate calling themselves Republicans whose active support of many New Deal policies seems to warrant a change of party affiliation. On the other hand, some of the sharpest and most consistent critics of the Administration are found among old-line Southern Democrats whose loyalty to party can be relied upon implicitly when it comes to a ballot-box test.

Under our two-party system of Government it is essential to have a large degree of stability of membership. Otherwise the party machinery upon which we depend to keep governmental wheels turning would tend to disintegrate. So long as both parties must bid for the support of large numbers of unlabeled, independent voters there is little danger that they will fail to meet the challenge of whatever issues happen to be of major concern to the American people.

Even though our two leading parties no longer represent any fixed body of principles or unbridgeable differences of opinion, they are indispensable adjuncts of a vital democratic system. For that reason the one-party system which prevails in the South is a very real sectional handicap. Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, minority leader of the House, rightly stressed that handicap in the speech which he delivered at Little Rock last Saturday before a Republican convention.

Of course, Mr. Martin was making an appeal for partisan support. Yet it is obvious that the dominance of one party prevents the Southerner from making his voice as effective as it might be in determining the course of national policies. Moreover, a State or a section of the country that can be counted upon to vote "solidly" for either party has little chance of ever capturing the Presidency for one of its local leaders, as Mr. Martin reminded his Southern audience.

The historical reasons for the dominance of a single party in the South are no longer controlling, while differences of opinion on social and economic issues are as pronounced there as in other parts of the country. But until divergent views can be adequately expressed through votes for rival party candidates, so-called representative government will fall short of being genuinely representative. When the South fully realizes that fact it may gradually shake off the chains of custom that have for so long bound a dominant majority to a party label.

Goats To Glory

It is pretty hard to disentangle whatever rights and wrongs may be snarled up in this strange controversy which involves on the one side the inventive genius of Mr. Lester P. Barlow and on the other the lives of several dozen goats.

Mr. Barlow, it seems, wants to blow these goats into tiny slivers of raw meat in order to prove that he has really invented a bomb that will destroy every living thing within a 1,000-foot radius of the point of explosion. A coterie of animal lovers has failed in its first attempt to have a court enjoin this experiment. Their argument was that it constitutes a palpable injustice to a genus with which the human race has, for countless ages, lived on friendly and indeed intimate terms.

Certainly, our Western civilization is indebted to this genus capra for many of its glories, including Roquefort cheese. From time to time, to be sure, certain actions of an aggressive nature have been alleged against goats collectively or individually. These seem to have taken the form of mild effluvial bombardments or occasional assaults by percussion, rarely if ever fatal to the victims. Thus the goat bombings proposed by Mr. Barlow can hardly be justified merely on the grounds of reprisal for injuries.

But there remains the religio-ethical argument that goats and other beasts have been created for the service and benefit of man as man himself has been created for the service of God. Thus the gentle cow who by transformation into beefsteak contributes to the nourishment of genius, the horse who contributes his tail and the cat her viscera, to the evocation of great music, the mink who contributes his only skin to the adornment of beauty, can be said to fulfill a noble destiny. Even more may this be said of the laboratory rat and the guinea pig which suffer that men may suffer less and which die that men may live.

Perhaps it is also proper that beasts should give their lives that men may die sooner and more abundantly. But it is very difficult to see any logic in it.

Appointment Delayed

Judge George C. Aukam continues to serve as presiding judge of the Municipal Court in spite of the fact that his term expired last July. He has shown a commendable attitude in thus pursuing his work, and keeping the calendar of the court up to date, while the slow machinery for making judicial appointments in the District goes into action. But the uncertainty of his status cannot reasonably be prolonged.

First appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1907, Judge Aukam has spent most of his adult life on the local bench. He is given a large share of the credit for creation of the Municipal Court in 1909 to replace the old Justice of the Peace system. Likewise he helped to secure an enlargement of the court's jurisdiction in 1921. More recently he was the leading spirit in the movement to secure a new court building. Now that the new quarters are about to be occupied, it would be especially fitting to have him installed as the presiding judge.

Judge Aukam has the reputation of being a hard-working jurist, as indicated by the fact that he keeps the calender of the Municipal Court up to date. In a court which handles 80,000 cases per year his diligence and administrative efficiency are a major consideration.

He is indorsed for reappointment by various judges in other District courts, the District Bar Association, the Women's Bar Association of the District, the Barristers Club, the Central Labor Union and various other civic groups. It would be strange, indeed, if a judge who has so many indorsements and who has been appointed by both Democratic and Republican Presidents over a period of 33 years should now be denied a commission to continue his work.

Senate And Silver

For the second time within a year the Senate has voted to suspend the buying of foreign silver. But it appears to be very doubtful whether the House will act upon the bill. Indeed, it is hinted that the "silver bloc" in the Senate did not put forth its best efforts because of a belief that the measure would be held up in the House.

As Senator Barkley says, the Silver Purchase Act "does not take money out of the pockets of the taxpayer in the ordinary sense," because silver acquisitions are paid for by issuance of silver certificates. But for every ounce of silver bought from foreigners, purchasing power has been put in the hands of foreigners and can be used to buy our goods. In other words, in exchange for an overvalued metal of which we have a superfluity, we are parting with valuable commodities. Furthermore, this silver adds to the volume of excess reserves and constitutes the basis for a potential inflation of credit and currency.

However, it seems futile to reiterate these and other conclusive arguments in favor of abandonment of a program that is among the maddest of all our misguided monetary experiments. With Administration support there might be hope of overcoming the resistance of the silver bloc. But with Secretary Morgenthau opposed to any change in the status quo because of the critical international situation, ultimate victory for the Townsend bill seems extremely doubtful.

An Onion-Eater's Saga

From the Hartford Daily Courant

Horatio Alger missed a sure-fire yarn when Everett Talbot was not born in his generation. Yesterday, the 23-year-old lad was being quizzed by NYA authorities that they might find him a suitable occupation. Today, he is en route to Hollywood with a fat movie contract in one hand and an onion in the other. And there is no intention of poking fun by the use of the word "onion." That vegetable is Everett's strong bid for fame.

The story goes that Everett munches the onion with the same relish that ordinary folk crunch an apple. As a matter of fact, he had little interest in anything but the growing and the eating of the vegetable, and the NYA instructors were quite puzzled as to what niche this odd character would fit. It so happened that a talent scout from movieland spied Everett nibbling away. Intrigued with this believe-it-or-not, he tarried a spell and watched the youngster consume a dozen and a half of the odorous balls in only two hours. There was little doubt about it; the kid was a "pro" in his special field, and the picture representative signed him for a series of movie shorts.

It is hazardous to point a moral in this success tale. One recalls the unfortunate craze that swept the colleges a year ago when all goldfish had to be kept under lock and key. To wish Everett a long movie career is to encourage shortcuts to prominence that are markedly antisocial.

Italy's Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the midst of all the speculations of the press and commentators relative to the present and future status of Italy in the world conflict, perhaps it is not unwise to note what the same country did in the Great War.

Philip Guedalla in his book "The Hundred Years" sums it all up with admirable clearness. He writes; "Its outbreak found them reluctant to take sides with either group in spite of the enticing circumstance that they were allied to one and highly friendly with the other. But the Italian attitude remained severely rational (in striking contradiction of the popular belief in ardent and impulsive Italians) until the relative advantages of joining either side had been precisely ascertained."

Does this not seem to clarify the situation somewhat and give us an idea of what we may expect from Il Duce? In the light of the foregoing, it seems to me that we can safely discount the anti-Allies press campaign now raging in Rome. Such a campaign gives no certain clew as to future bestowal of Italian sympathies and material aid. The Italian is more shrewd than he is commonly given credit for and Mussolini is shrewdness personified. In great probability Hitler is for him more of a means to an end than an object of fear. PHILIP A. RYAN.

On The Right To Picket

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the opinion of the Supreme Court, written by Justice Murphy, on the question of peaceful picketing and sustaining the right thereof on the ground that it is the exercise of the right of freedom of speech which may not be abridged, and your editorial thereon, permit me a brief discussion on the subject.

It would seem that the justice went very far afield for an argument to sustain such acts. To one of ordinary intelligence and discernment there seems to be little connection or relation between picketing and the freedom of speech, or how denying the right of picketing abridges in any way the freedom of speech of the would-be picketers, for if workmen have a dispute with their employer the papers and the hustings are available to them to tell their side of the dispute, and to say whatever they choose with untrammeled freedom, subject only to the law of libel.

Just a word now as to the legal right of picketing. True the courts have sustained the right, but did they not err in doing so through ineptitude or because the law of the subject was not fully and intelligently presented to them?

The Constitution of the United States, that great charter of our liberties, guarantees to every individual security of life, liberty, and property. The word Liberty was not used in the Constitution in any narrow sense, but in the broadest meaning as a result of the abuses of individual liberty in the past with which the framers of the Constitution were perfectly familiar. It embraces and was intended to embrace all of the natural rights of man, such for example as freedom of locomotion, freedom of conscience, and speech, freedom of contract with respect to the ordinary and usual matters of daily life and intercourse, private ownership of property with security in the use and the possession thereof, the right to engage in the pursuit of any and all legitimate business and professional undertakings for pleasure or profit, without let, hindrance, or interference, except insofar as such pursuits may be affected with a public interest, and which may be therefore subject to governmental regulation for the public welfare, such for example as the operation of a railroad.

The liberty to engage in a legitimate business, free from coercion, molestation, or interference by others is unquestionably a right recognized and guaranteed by the Constitution, and is entitled to the protection of all the powers of Government, and in respect to which if the Government fails it is unworthy support of the people.

It is an unfortunate fact, as stated, that oftentimes in the past our courts, probably for the reasons given, have failed to affirm and uphold the constitutional rights of the citizen to immunity from picketing. It is also true that the right to such protection has been often denied by the politicians, but little else could be expected from them, for they are always found on that side of every question that political prudence and expedience dictate. Nevertheless it exists as a fundamental right of the citizen, which the Constitution simply recognizes and proclaims.

Now what is the object of union labor in picketing one's place of business whether it be done with violence or peacefully? It is to coerce the proprietor into acceding to the demands of the parties the picketers represent, and that too often without regard to the practicability or justice of the demands made upon him, or his ability to pay an increased wage when that is the issue. Under such circumstances what becomes of the constitutional liberty of the proprietor, of his property rights, and of the free and untrammeled conduct of his business?

To sanction or approve of picketing, no matter how peaceful, is to make a hollow mockery of the Constitutional guarantees mentioned, to encourage violence, to deny the businessman the "equal protection of the law," and to strike a fatal blow at the fundamental right of the ownership of property, all of which are the bases of social order, and bulwarks of civilization. Strike down these securities, that have become our heritage after two thousand years of bloody struggle, and what will be the inevitable results? Russia and Germany of today give us the melancholy and terrifying answer.

Aside from the wrong and injury to the person whose place of business is picketed, and the infringement of his most elemental rights, picketing is also an annoyance to and an encroachment upon the rights of the public, and is well calculated to, and often does lead to violence, and disturbance of the peace and good order of the community, as has been so often demonstrated during the past several years. ALEXANDER S. LANIER.

Likes Them Plump

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a column, especially for women, a writer in The Post of May 3, under the following heading: "Hefty Beauties Glorified in Old Masters' Paintings Lacked Health of Streamlined Girls of the Present," has this to say: "Physicians' Group Diagnoses Overplump Women Portrayed by Rubens as Having Glandular Trouble."

Accompanying the article is a glorious picture of that superbly healthy wife of Peter Paul Rubens, Helena Fourment, and also a pleasing picture of Ann Sheridan.

Physicians too often fall down in diagnosing exact physical conditions of their present-day patients, and to diagnose the state of health from a portrait of the early part of the seventeenth century is certainly "going some!"

Mr. Gustav Kobbe, in the Mentor of August 25, 1913, under the heading, "The Wife in Art," has this to say of Rubens' second wife: "This marriage proved to be as happy as the first, although he was already 53 and she barely 16. Their union was blessed with five handsome children; so that his declining years found him surrounded by youth and beauty, and with a splendid young wife as comrade." The writer adds, "Helena had a strong, fully developed figure of pronounced contour, rosy flesh tints, golden hair and lips that seemed always partly open to show the flash of pure white teeth."

I believe that the present-day "streamliners" will not compare very favorably with the fully developed women of earlier times, or today.

I know a woman who was up doing her washing the second day after each of her six children was born. I have seen her put a fork of hay up on a load which must have weighed about 150 pounds! She told me she used to wake up in the winter mornings and brush the snow out of her hair, as she slept by an open window in the mountain region of West Virginia. She died recently at an age of over 80 years.

She was not a "streamliner," as she weighed 230 pounds when she was married, but she was a well-built woman. Her mother had 13 children—10 of them without a doctor in the house! I knew another woman—65 years old, who said she never had a cold in her life. So far as she was concerned, "germs" did not exist!

When it comes to real health and endurance, the "streamliner" cannot make the grade! They are like a beautiful vase—fine to look at, but very fragile! ARTIST.

A La Zola

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lewis Gannett's favorable comments in your issue of May 8 on the novel awarded the Pulitzer Prize are not unqualifiedly shared by the editor of The Post.

In raising the query "whether or not 'The Grapes of Wrath' is great literature" you have stated the only consideration that the judges ought to have been concerned with. By this standard it seems to me that the selection of the Steinbeck novel falls short of the artistic worth which should exist above all else in works of the imagination. But that Steinbeck has etched a vivid picture of real social value, a la Zola, none will gainsay.

The late critic, Ford Maddox Ford, whose judgment of fictional writing was based on the highest criterion of artistic merit, would probably have agreed with your editorial remarks, finding this quality more perfectly achieved in "Of Mice and Men" than in "The Grapes of Wrath." GUY d'AULBY.

Chicago, May 9.

The Post Impressionist

Mr. Kirkley Kicks

Sure, I'm squawking; even yipping if you want to call it that. I'm one of those long-horned, hard-headed goats of the editorial copy desk of what I hope is your favorite morning newspaper. We are the forgotten men of journalism—until something goes wrong in the paper; then, we catch . . .

All we have to do is to try and sift out of the yards of copy thrust at us by reporters, city editors, assistant city editors, telegraph editors, news editors, ad nauseum, a few facts if we can discern them as kernels smothered by chaff of experting and interpreting that writers insist on. Then we put on headlines we hope tell the story. We don't know either, half the time!

This collection of words—some quite useless in keeping with the streamlined era of newspapering—(Lord, how I hate that word!)—will ultimately settle down and say that things in the business ain't what they used to be. They've just gone to pieces, according to the hard and fast rules under which I learned this trade.

Or maybe at the ripe old age of 34 and with some 17 years of experience behind me, I've set my feet firmly at long last on the hallowed ground of being a veteran in the Fourth Estate. Naturally, us old-timers always oppose progress and never recognize genius when we see it.

For the uninitiated in the newspaper racket, the editorial copy desk is the funnel through which all stories that go into a newspaper must clear before going to the compositors. All we have to do is to make the stories read, make sense if that is possible, put on a headline and pick up the next piece.

I started in 1923 as an office boy and worked my way up to all the jobs inside the editorial office, did a hitch with the Associated Press on the Senate in Washington and finally got to be a trained seal, and only had to write one story a day. But, at my advanced age, I am trying to learn all over again; just a new cub in today's way of handling things.

The fundamentals hammered into me were: get the facts and check all names; get your story together and get it together fast in simple language for the garbage man in Galveston, not The Nation's readers; be impartial in the treatment of facts; tell the story as it happened, and if it were sensational or bizarre, the facts would show that without the help of any adjectives.

These simple rules have been relegated to the ash can by today's crop of reporters. To any ambitious young man or woman starting into the profession today, the first advice I'd give is: stay out of it. But, if you feel you just have to get your feet wet, be an essayist and write poetry in prose; don't bother about syntax, the copy desk will take care of that.

Don't let the facts annoy you. And, as the cardinal axiom, be sure and use at least 1,000 words when a hundred would do, or your colleagues won't think much of your piece. Be sure all the news appears after paragraph 12; never put it in the first two or three paragraphs.

Always be interpretative in your writing. Of course, what you write may need an interpreter to explain what you mean to the simple brains that have to understand it in their efforts to put a headline on it, but: that's all right. It used to be that a newspaper was got out for readers; remember that today it's intended to please the reporters; what the writer and editors want to see in print is more important than a mere reader. Phooey on him! All the reader does is pay the bills; poor capitalist!

There's another angle one mustn't overlook. Always try to get some class angle into the story. Don't hesitate to air your pet peeve or favorite crusade or your philosophical or ideological bias in any story you write. By all means, get plenty of mystery into any piece. The war service of the New York Times has some excellent examples, such as leads beginning: "All is confusion along the . . . or (my favorite); "All is conjecture today . . ." Try and write an 84-point or 96-point headline on that sometime!

Be sure and write a colorful story. Naturally, you may have to strive for it, if the story doesn't happen to be colorful, but don't let that stop you! After all, the art of writing poetry in prose is to have a creative mind. We had a good example the other day:

Six Chinese sat down to breakfast. Either they got some rat poison thinking it was rice dust or the fish they ate were a little tired. Anyway, two died and four got sick. Those are the simple facts and, after all, what's a Chinese more or less, among friends? But, the story comes up to the desk something like this:

"A bizarre Oriental mystery, with some of the overtones of a Fu Manchu thriller, struck yesterday . . ." That is real color; poesy of the highest order.

The Associated Press came through with a nice one, too, the other day: "Godsent was the hour at which the tornado struck . . ." We backsliders on the desk almost wired the reporter "forget storm, interview God, etc." For some reason or another, I've always had an idea that most catastrophes were Godsent or God-directed or something of that nature.

We old-timers from across the Styx occasionally get together in an attempt to analyze the new trend. The majority opinion seems to be that it's the Oxonian or Phi Beta Kappa influence on journalism. One used to get a job and work up in the business. But that era has passed. The trade is filled with professors, essayists and authors now; it would never occur to them to write a simple narrative, the sacred ideal of a real newspaperman. Someone has said with a certain touch of irony, it's nice to be a newspaperman because you meet such interesting people; the copy editor revises that today to read; such interesting reporters.

I realize I may get fired if and when this appears in print. But, being something of a heretic, I don't care. I will at least have the satisfaction of having got out of my system a terrific bellyache brought on by acute indigestion from attempting to make fairly readable and, occasionally intelligent, copy out of the stuff that pours across the desk. But I'm fairly young; maybe I'll learn new tricks —don kirkley.

Hearing, Believing

Nazi Forecasts

TWO MONTHS AGO Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, predicted that the Germans would invade Holland on May 10. He arrived at this through no process of divination, but by reading intelligence reports that Hitler had set May 10 as "the day." As such reports are frequent and often conflicting, Col. Johnson probably did not have undue faith in his forecast, made conversationally to a few friends. Nevertheless, having made it, he stuck by it, even during the Norwegian invasion, as to which our officials had no forewarnings.

Col. Johnson's information was available, of course, to other officials. It was available also to the British, French, Dutch and Belgian governments, who knew also that more than 60 German divisions had been assembled on the borders of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Between this information and the unhappy circumstances under which Neville Chamberlain surrendered the Prime Ministership, there is a direct connection. The occasion for his withdrawal was the lack of confidence in his leadership, brought to a head by the British failure in Norway. True, the British, like the Norwegians, were caught napping by the Nazi thrust to the north. They were slow in launching their rather feeble counter-attack. And, except in the Narvik area, they quickly withdrew when they found that the cost of fighting longer would be heavy.

AN UNDERLYING reason, however, for the British failure in Norway was the belief of the British cabinet and its expert naval and military advisers that a great Nazi thrust into the lowlands was imminent, probably accompanied or immediately followed by an aerial blitzkrieg against Great Britain, and perhaps even by an attempt directly to invade the British Isles. And perhaps also by the entry of Italy into the war.

With limited military resources on land and in the air, the British had concentrated on the main areas of danger. According to reports reaching here, they kept naval forces off Holland throughout the Norwegian campaign, to impede Nazi efforts to transport troops to Dutch ports and to make possible the landing of Allied troops to assist in the defense of areas of Holland which could not be reached quickly overland from Belgium, especially if the Dutch defense by inundation was successful.

Conceivably, the historical judgment will be that the Chamberlain government was correct in concentrating on the defense of the Lowlands and in refusing to divert any considerable strength to Norway. If so, it is extremely ironic that Chamberlain should have felt compelled to surrender his seals of office at the very moment of materialization of the far greater threat which had guided, and may ultimately be thought to justify his decisions with regard to Norway.

THE CRITICISM visited upon Chamberlain by liberals in this country and now by leaders of the Labor and Liberal parties, and many members of his own party in England, seems excessive. For he has had to bear the burden of the errors of others. Among them is the soft-headed internationalism of the Labor Party, who did not see soon enough the necessity for the rearmament of Britain. Among them is the dreamy complacency of Stanley Baldwin, his predecessor as Prime Minister.

Chamberlain agreed to the Munich settlement. Perhaps he really believed that Munich meant "peace in our time." Certainly he strove to the limit for peace. But he had no alternative. For his predecessor had failed to provide Britain with the armed force necessary to the adoption of a strong policy.

The turning point in the history of post-war Europe was not Munich, but the German reoccupation of the Rhineland in March, 1936. This clearly presaged the erection of the German West Wall, which cut the French army off from its Allies on the eastern frontier of Germany, and thus destroyed the French military domination of Europe. The French could have chased the German forces of occupation out of the Rhineland with a few divisions. It is known now that the German troops marched in with orders to march out again promptly if the French offered any resistance.

BUT THE FRENCH did not move. Stanley Baldwin was Prime Minister of England. He discouraged the French from moving. The Labor leaders who had been willing to risk war with Italy to save the Ethiopians did not urge the French to take the simple step which could have averted the now mortal threat to the existence of the British and French empires. There was not even any comment from the President of the United States.

Baldwin also remained woefully blind to the growth of the German air force, which produced Munich, obliterated Poland before its armies could mobilize, and enabled the Germans to get a strangle-hold on Norway in four weeks.

Chamberlain has shown no signs of genius. But he is tougher, more alert, and probably generally more able than any of his predecessors in the Prime Ministership since the downfall of Lloyd George. And he may have been knocked out at the very moment that he was supremely right.

'Stuffed Dummies'

A SLIGHT ERROR occurred in these dispatches a couple of days ago which it is now designed to correct.

In discussing the athletic program or gymkhana to be discoursed in connection with the convention of the Stagehands and Movie Employes' Union, which will be held in Louisville beginning June 3 and continued until the police are able to recapture the city, these dispatches said stuffed dummies, representing the American working stiff, would be used in the blackjack exhibition—the feature of the show.

Your correspondent has received many calls from indignant leaders of this distinguished organization denying that such is the plan. Stuffed dummies will not be used, and moreover, the event will not be an exhibition, but a competitive tournament for cash prizes. Live subjects will be used.

MOST OF THEM will be taken from the rank and file of Local 306, of the Moving Picture Operators of New York City, a body of men who have developed special craft and agility in ducking blows of the blackjack through long experience under the leadership of Mr. Sam Kaplan, a prison alumnus.

It is felt that members of Local 306 will offer the best sport and call forth the best efforts of the gorillas who serve the cause of labor with a capital L under the leadership of the international president, Mr. George Brown. The members of Local 306 are fleet, nimble and possessed of marvelous skill in ducking into doorways, running upstairs and leaping from roof to roof when attacked by sportsmen with blackjacks, and it is felt that a covey of stiffs from 306, augmented, perhaps, by a few stars from the Los Angeles district, where Willie Bioff's sluggers developed some unusually fine performers, will bring out the best that is in the gorillas of the union.

"We never use stuffed dummies, and whoever it was that told you we were planning to use [illegible] probably was an enemy of [illegible] desirous of giving our leader a bad name," an angry voice informed your correspondent on the 'phone. "We always use the fastest and most durable live stiffs that we can get, and we have found that because of their long training under practical conditions the members of 306 provide the best sport.

"SOMETIMES YOU have to chase them two or three blocks and send beaters up the stairs two or three doors down the street to head them off as they hop over the roof. Some of them are so tough that you have to practically beat their ears off, and I assure you that glancing blows do not count for anything against those 306 boys. You have to conk them dead square or they will get away every time.

"Naturally, as sportsmen, we do not like that, not only because we like to get a stiff once we belt him, but also because if you just swipe a stiff in a glancing manner he may get away and lie in some dark alley or hallway and suffer for hours."

A proposal to borrow some stiffs from Local 167, of the Chicken Drivers and Helpers, a subsidiary of the Teamsters, was voted down with scorn. It is conceded that this organization, under the eminent Tootsie Herbert, developed some stiffs quite as elusive and durable as the best in 306, but the pride of the Stagehands and Movie Operators' Union would not permit a request for help from a brother organization. It was felt that the Stagehands and Movie Employes owed it to themselves to provide all the talent out of their own membership.

AS THE PLANS stand at present each stiff will be required to show up at Louisville at his own expense, with $100 of his own money in his pocket. They will be turned loose, one at a time, in a typical Louisville block, which will be roped off at each end, and the blackjack teams, of four gorillas each, will be given 10 minutes to get the $100.

For competitive purposes the official Willie Bioff model blackjack will be used, a 17-ounce weapon of soft leather loaded with shot. The unofficial though highly popular lead model is barred. An interesting and enjoyable time is anticipated by all the gorillas.

Southwest

IF YOU WANT to know what they were eating in the Southwest a century ago there is no better guide than Victor Tixier, whose "Voyage aux prairies osages, Louisiane et Missouri, 1839-'40," published in France in 1844, has long been a collector's item and is now translated for the first time: "Tixier's Travels on the Osage Prairies" (University of Oklahoma Press, $3), edited by John Francis McDermott, of Washington University, a specialist in the affairs of Creole Saint Louis.

This Tixier was a winning Frenchman, 24 years old, who had pricked his thumb while studying to be a doctor in Paris and who took a sea voyage to recover from the resultant blood poisoning. He knew enough medicine to improve on Osage Indian methods of treating rattlesnake bites; he had a wide range of intelligent curiosities, and he had a quiet delight in adventure which makes his narrative far more readable than most of the diaries dug up by historians.

He landed in New Orleans on January 27, 1840, passed three months visiting plantations and stag hunting up and down the river, leaving for St. Louis in mid-May and meeting on the steamer one of the Chouteaus of the great fur-trading family. It was Chouteau who enabled Tixier to join the Osages. Tixier went by boat to Lexington, by stage the remaining 30 miles to Independence (now a suburb of Kansas City, then the jumping-off place for the "Far West"), bought horses there and found the main Osage encampment in southeastern Kansas before June. He lived with the Osages, turkey hunting, deer hunting, and bison hunting, for ten months and accompanied them westward to the Oklahoma saltlicks, a land of constant skirmish with the Pawnees.

Osage food pleased Tixier more than Mississippi steamer rations. "The hair of Brillat-Savarin would have turned gray in one hour," he reported, if that physiologist of taste could have watched the Americans feed. A great table ran the length of the cabin; a line of platters occupied its center; and the guests helped themselves as they pleased, waited for no one and left the table as soon as they had gobbled. He watched one American heap on to a plate a huge chunk of roast beef, a slice of fish, baked apples, onions, mustard, white and sweet potatoes, "etc." One wonder what the "etc." represented.

Tixier's observations on rattlesnakes and fireflies, on Indian tents and bark huts, on the charcoal dance and the etiquette of Indian warfare, on Osage ways with women and their primitive communism (no Indian went hungry when any one in the tribe had food) are as precise and as entertaining.

At The Station

By Dorothy Thompson

Poilus' Solemn Good-By

Paris, May 11.

THE SOLDIER stands face to face with his girl, his hands on her waist, under the jacket. The officer holds his girl by her arms. The soldier kisses his girl unashamedly. The officer kisses his girl with his eyes. None of the four speaks at all.

THE FRENCH are a talkative people. On the crowded platform hardly a word is heard. What is there to say now that has not been said before? What is apprehended that was not long since apprehended? What has come that was not awaited?

"Sincerely trusts" . . . "Conscience of mankind" . . . "Respects neutrality" . . . "Rights of nonbelligerents." . . .

Hitler's troops without warning crossed the frontiers of Luxembourg, Holland, Belgium, Friday, May 10, 1940, at dawn. They dropped into Holland in Dutch uniforms, from parachutes. Men from Mars.

"We shall breed a new race out of an elite, trained to hardness, cruelty, violence; supermen, leading masses. On them we shall found a new Reich, that will last for 1,000 years.

"The supermen will be ingenious, treacherous, masterful. The masses will be uniform, with arms that rise and fall rhythmically, voices that cry hoarsely, rhythmically, 'Seig Heil!' "

"First the men from Mars, and then the masses. Breed them, mothers! Prizes for the most fertile! Equality for the illegitimate! Born in love or lust or for a bonus, all are equal, all alike, one folk, one Reich, one Fuehrer."

THE SOLDIERS on the Paris railway station are uniformed, but they are not uniform. Men of yesterday, why has each of you a different face? You, so diverse, so individual; you, with the ascetic bones and the cynical eyes; you, little soldier with the gleeful mouth of a peasant epicurean; you, lover of books and you, lover of your girl, and you with the nervous lips—you have got to meet the man of tomorrow. No. 1135, type B.

The soldier holds his little girl on his shoulder; she has big, wet black eyes, like the eyes in a drawing by Laurencin. He strokes her hair—the hair of his individual little girl, a French child, precious, rare.

"The French birth rate is stable, the small family is the rule. The family is the basis of society. One has the number of children that one can support and educate."

"This one is clever and shall go to the lycee."

"DEMOGRAPHICALLY speaking, the French are a dying race. There are 42,000,000 French and 80,000,000 Germans. The Third Reich needs room for its growing population."

"Make room, little father, make room!" Nobody smiles, nobody sings. "What! No Tipperary? No Madelon?"

A woman in black holds her son in her arms. Tears flow down her face. His lip trembles slightly. The women of Sparta exposed their weakling children to the elements. They sent them into battle with the cry, "Return with your sword or on it!"

But Homer, whose name is given to the age of heroes, was blind.

"Man for man the French army is the best in the world."

The boy is nine years old. He stands apart, while his father and mother say something to each other, swift and low. He wears his Sunday suit. He cries bitterly but without noise.

"Nazi youth do not weep."

THE WHISTLE blows. The officer holds his girl's cheek to his. The soldier kisses his girl on the mouth. Just once more!

Nobody watches any one else. No one pretends. No one is pretending anything.

"Kill a Boche for me, darling." Didn't they say that in the last war?

No one says a word about Boche or killing. Not a word. Not a flag. Not a salute . . . not an au revoir. They pull apart, and the men crowd into the cars. They wear good woolen uniforms and good thick boots.

They look through the open windows—a thousand faces, a thousand different faces, not one like another, not one common expression, not one replaceable face. Now, at last, they smile, kindly, comfortingly, understandingly. The women and the girls stand together, but each alone, each surrounded by a little space of loneliness and separateness, each alone in her tears.

The train begins to move. The men wave. The women wave and weeping, smile.

No one calls "Vive la France!" There goes France.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Human Touch

In Brooklyn, N. Y., a street cleaner has been ordained a bishop. He still works cleaning the city streets on weekdays. The more you think of it the more you realize that it would be hard for a man to work as a street sweeper one week without coming into a deeper understanding of men.

A city's gutters tell a dramatic and not very pretty story of a city's life, and a White Wing reads it daily.

A mess of torn papers tells him of slovenliness . . . a battered bouquet preaches the sermon of the passing of all of material things . . . a battered derby records, perhaps, a street fight in which the Commandments were forgotten . . . a torn collar records a drunken orgy . . . a lady's slipper in the middle of the highway may tell of a wedding, a wild taxi ride or too much wine at a birthday party . . .

A mud-covered program testifies to a night at the play . . . a pile of old cardboard boxes tells of somebody's inherent laziness . . . here a tomato can and some eggshells show how little some householder thinks of the other fellow . . . and there a faded horseshoe wreath marked "Good Luck," lying in a pool of yellow water, proves that Tony, proprietor of the new barber shop, is an indifferent southpaw too lazy to dispose of refuse the regular way.

Bishop Paoceli knows the sloppiness of man. He is surrounded by evidence of man's inhumanity to man. He sees many a good citizen toss an old paper into the gutter, with a waste can immediately at hand; he hears the curses of the taxi driver who backs down on his broom in the bargain; he is bawled out by the truckman who wants to hog the road, and he knows what it is to be splashed with mud from the sedans of the rich.

He politely asks you to move your car ahead a little so he can sweep up properly and hears your "Aw, what's bitin' ya?" He gets used to being looked down on. He has to know humility, patience, industry and self-control.

Above all other men, a street cleaner must believe zealously in a better world.

Put the average man to cleaning streets for 24 hours and what would happen? He would be about as irascible, profane and mean a fellow as you could find anywhere. And he probably would be under a half dozen court summonses for hitting inconsiderate fellow men with a broom.

Song of Hate for the Faint-Hearted

I'd make a little man of wax,
And run it through with rusty tacks,
And scratch its belly with your name,
And burn it with a tiny flame,
And pray it killed you where you stood—
If I weren't afraid it would.
—Morley Brand.

Late Again

"Our usual restrictions in submarine attack were relaxed. All German ships by day and by night were sunk as opportunity served. This statement was most foolishly and grotesquely twisted into the statement that all German ships in the Skagerrak would be sunk."
—Winston Churchill.

Well, Winston, you knew the statement over your own name had gone all over the world by press and radio and you waited a long time to correct it.

Mussolini's attitude may be described as that of a man who is working hard for peace with both fists.

The Supreme Bid

By Barnet Nover

The Rest Was Prelude

"THE PAST is prelude," says an inscription on the Archives Building. Never has the truth of that apothegm found more dramatic demonstration than during the last few days. For all else that has happened in Europe since the present war began, indeed, every move made by Hitler since he came into power more than seven years ago, now stands clearly revealed as prelude to the immensely tragic theme now being unfolded in the low countries.

Military experts are debating whether Hitler's purpose in invading Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg is to outflank the Maginot Line and bring the war into France or whether he is primarily interested in securing air and submarine bases in the low countries from which to launch a devastating attack on England.

The fighting both in Belgium and the Netherlands thus far suggests that he may have both aims in mind. In any event, however, the debate is largely academic. Hitler's ultimate objective is forever to destroy the British and French capacity to oppose him. This involves the destruction of French military power no less than of British sea power.

It is only of incidental importance which is achieved first. For British sea power and French military power are now inextricably interlocked. One cannot be destroyed without the destruction of the other.

THE UNSHAKABLE unity of Great Britain and France is now axiomatic. But it was not axiomatic at first, at least not to Hitler. Not otherwise would he have sought so earnestly and so persistently to drive a wedge between the Allies, to confine his hymns of hatred to Great Britain and treat France and the French with marked tenderness.

Had he achieved his aim of dividing the Allies, the Franco-British barrier to the achievement of his soaring ambitions would have disappeared. England and France would then, individually, be in the position of Czecho-Slovakia after Munich, a country with its defensive bastion destroyed and thus an easy prey to the Nazis. Hitler now finds it necessary to attack both Britain and France at once, to achieve through military means the goal he had failed to achieve by cajolery and threats and propaganda.

FOR THAT AMBITIOUS move he has long prepared the Reich. In Spain, in Poland, in Norway the tactis of the blitzkrieg, including the role of carefully trained "fifth columns," were tried out in actual practice. They now face the supreme test and this test had to come sooner or later, for as long as French military power was unbroken and British sea power was unimpaired all the previous gains scored by the Third Reich were, potentially, only Pyrrhic victories. In practically every instance the conquests achieved by German triumphs have weakened, not strengthened Germany so far as the long pull is concerned. The strategic advantage to be derived from Germany's past conquests from Austria to Norway are, however, considerable.

THIS CIRCUMSTANCE helps explain why Hitler could not afford to wait. For he could not, except to a very limited and temporary extent, capitalize his victories in the economic sphere. He could only cash in on them in the military sphere. At this point the time factor began to assume a special importance.

When the war began last September the Allies were supreme on the sea, Germany enjoyed a very considerable preponderance in the air while both sides enjoyed something like a rough equality on land.

This military equality in itself suggested the possibility of a stalemate similar to that which existed on the Western Front for four years following the Battle of the Marne and that possibility became a continuing certainty as long as the contending armies were lined up along the Maginot and Siegfried lines. If the deadlock were to be broken either superiority at sea or German superiority in the air had to be overcome.

FLEETS cannot be built overnight. It takes at least three years to construct a battleship and even smaller craft cannot be improvised. That meant that unless Allied sea power were destroyed by submarines, mines and bombing planes Germany would have to reckon with the cumulative pressures of a blockade which, in the long run, might strangle her.

An air fleet, however, can be built in the course of a war. During the World War, for instance, British plane production rose from practically nothing to over 30,000 a year. The British and French both happened to be considerably behind Germany in airplane production when the present struggle began. But that was being overcome through domestic production and through purchases, particularly in the United States. The indications are, however, that this goal is still far from being reached. In other words the advantage, so far as air power is concerned, has remained with Germany, but Hitler since the outset of the war has had to take into account the probability that in time this advantage would disappear. To wait, therefore, would be equivalent to giving the Allies time to catch up and once the Allies were superior in the air as well as the sea, German chances of victory would face progressive diminution.

So Hitler has chosen to strike now while German air superiority can yet manifest itself. He has apparently decided that if he is to win he must win quickly and at no matter what cost.

The gamble is a tremendous one. For if his armies are held up, let alone being driven back, the enormous economic sacrifices which Germany has been forced to make to secure the present strategic advantages will begin to operate with great force against her. The war has entered its truly decisive stage. The fate of Europe and of the world will be decided in Belgium and the Netherlands during the next weeks.

Oscar Chapman, Bride Guests at Tea Party

Harry W. Blairs Entertain at Their Alexandria Home; Other Sunday Afternoon Affairs Keep Society Busy

Tea time yesterday found scarcely a social light at home—unless he, or she, entertained at a party. Despite chill winds in a sunny day, half the hostesses in town proudly displayed gardens of the spacious or vest pocket variety.

One of the largest gatherings—this with an official accent—was at the lovely Alexandria home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Blair, who entertained in honor of the Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, and his bride. The hosts, whose hospitality is superb, will entertain at a similar tea party next Sunday.

Mrs. John Enochs had invited a congenial group to her Virginia home to view her lilacs—originally planted in the eighteenth century. Among those who motored down to take a peek at the pale lavender flowers were Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis. Earlier in the afternoon they had entertained a group for luncheon at their home on the Potomac, Rippon Lodge, and following it they trundled their guests off to see the lilacs.

Thomases Give Gala Party

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Francis De Lashmutt Thomas had gathered in a group around cocktail time at their home on Kalorama circle—which boasts a garden. Assisting the hostess was Mrs. Charles M. Thomas and Mrs. John R. Eakin. Others who dropped in during the afternoon included Justice and Mrs. O. R. Luhring, Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, Justice and Mrs. James M. Proctor, Col. and Mrs. Charles H. March, Commissioner and Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Judge and Mrs. Charles S. Hatfield, Judge and Mrs. Joseph R. Jackson, Commissioner and Mrs. Thad Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Sanders, Judge and Mrs. Oscar E. Bland, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming and Mr. and Mrs. John Lewis Smith.

Still another gala party which made yesterday's calendar one of the merriest—and most hectic—of the season was a fete given by attractive Miss Gerry Dick in honor of Miss Ruby Black, president of the Women's National Press Club.

Mrs. Hugo Black Assists Hostess

But to digress a bit, the Blairs' party in Alexandria was great fun. The nostess wore a swirling bit of black chiffon splashed in bright flower colors. Mrs. Chapman had donned a smart black chiffon frock with a wide gathered collar of white organdy. Her small black hat had a starched net visor.

Food and drink were plentiful. Guests wandered about the spacious rooms of the famous "Dr. Brown" house, and out into the garden where a large punch bowl was placed. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Hugo Black, Miss Josephine Roche, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Miss Maxine Davis, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Miss Ruby Black, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. P. W. Chappell, Miss Magaretta Newell, Mrs. Ralph Putnam and Mrs. Blair Bannister.

Much of the conversation yesterday centered on the "ghost" which the Blairs' house—like every self-respecting Alexandria home—is supposed to possess. This particular ghost, a wounded Revolutionary soldier, arrives at midnight on the thirteenth of every month when there is a new moon!

Senator, Mrs. Barkley Attend Affair

Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley attended the party. Others there included Mr. and Mrs. Newell Blair, son and daughter-in-law of the hosts, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; the former Minister to Canada and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, with their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn.

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi were there as were Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Williams, Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, Mrs. George Dern, Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith, Mrs. Sol Bloom and her daughter, Vera; Mr. and Mrs. Duke Shoop, who have recently returned from a trip to Bermuda; Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle.

Summer Art Preview Held At Wesley Hall

Prize-Winners In Oil, Water-Color Offerings Announced

More than 200 persons attended the preview of a summer art exhibition at Wesley Hall last night. Honor guest was Jona Konopka (Mrs. Earl Calhoun) Polish-American author whose book of short stories with illustrations by Theodora Kane, wife of Maj. Norman Kane, is soon to be published.

One feature of last night's show was the first public view of "Maryska," one of the pictures which illustrates one of the Konopka stories. The original will be sold and proceeds will be donated to the Polish unit of the American Red Cross.

Theodora Kane, who directs the gallery, announced the prize winners in the summer exhibition of oils and water colors. These winners were chosen by a jury including several prominent Washington painters, Richard Lahey, Margaret Gates, Lucia B. Hollerith and Auriel Bessemer.

Nine prizes were donated by local merchants to stimulate interest in the fine work being done by young American painters. The winners are Jack I. Berkman, portrait; Andrea Zerega, figure composition; Oke Nordgren and Howard Chapman, landscape; Miss Bernice Barnhard and Eli Luria, still life; and Paul Arlt and Gretchen Thomas, water color. A special prize for the best painting by a woman went to Miss Mary Power.

Tuckermans Give Dinner in Honor Of Louise Darrall

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman entertained at a dinner party at the Chevy Chase Club on Saturday night in honor of Miss Louise Tunstall Darrall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Darrall, of Philadelphia, and her fiance, Charles Marshall Barton, of Baltimore. Miss Darrall spends a good deal of her time with her grandmother, Mrs. Tunstall Smith, of Baltimore. There was another table of guests at which Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman were hosts in honor of Mrs. Smith.

Young people attending included Miss Isabelle Barton and Aldrich Davis, of Baltimore; Miss Marie Vom Rath, Miss Eleanor Flood, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Capt. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Miss Yolande de Mauduit, Miss Emily Myers, Miss Ruth Tuckerman, Lieut. Frank Govern, Clem Conger, Sherry McAdams, Horton Schoellkopff, Alexander Shields and Howell Walker.

Historic Mt. Airy's Beauty to Be Opened To Public's View by Tayloes Friday

MOUNT AIRY, on the Rappahannock River in Warsaw County, Va., will be open to the public Friday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. One of the most famous Colonial houses in America, Mount Airy was built in 1758 by Col. John Tayloe 2d.

The Misses Tayloe will open their home for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal Church, in Warsaw. Mount Airy has not been open to the public for some years, so this will be an opportunity to see one of the loveliest and most historic places in the country.

Tea will be served all afternoon by girls of the neighborhood, wearing Colonial costumes. Admission will be 50 cents including tea. Mount Airy is made of a brown sandstone which was quarried on the land. The main building is large and square. Reaching out from the sides are low, curved covered ways, leading to large wings on each end. In this way the architecture of the house is different from other historic Virginia homes.

From the back door, leading from the wide and spacious hall, you come upon the garden, which has been described as "a basket of flowers against the hillside."

A FEW DAYS ago there were blooming there, tall, white spikes of Vanhouette's spiraea growing through the flaming bloom of cydonia japonica, a sight long to be remembered. These huge bushes were planted there together, years ago by an owner of the place. The combination is superb. There are lilac hedges in bloom now and many other lovely blossoms. Many members of Fauquier and the Loudoun Garden Club are planning to motor to Mount Airy on Friday, and some members of Warrenton, Leesburg and Clarke County clubs will go.

Sporting events to attend today include the Foxcroft Horse Show, starting at 10 a. m. and lasting all day, with a delicious luncheon to be served during the recess hour. A large crowd is expected and many of the parents of the girls will be here.

CHARLES TOWN Jockey Club spring meeting begins today at Charles Town, W. Va. Post time 2:30 o'clock and many will journey there to see the seven or eight races to be run. This meeting will last through July 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Bayly entertained at luncheon on Saturday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gibb, who were recently married in Harrisonburg, Va., and who are now back at their home, Mintanice, near Hillsboro. Maj. and Mrs. Percy Black, of Washington, have been visiting his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Black, near Warrenton.

Mrs. Wilmer Asks Guild Members To Luncheon

Mrs. Pere Allison Wilmer has invited the active members of St. Gertrude's Guild to a luncheon tomorrow at her Leesburg residence, Stone House Farm.

Details will be completed for the variety show to be given at the Mayflower Friday, May 24, as a benefit for St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts.

Mrs. Wilmer's family has been prominently identified with the work of St. Gertrude's Guild, her mother, Mrs. Milton E. Ailes, being one of the founders, and her daughter, Miss Peggy Wilmer, an active member of the Junior Guild.

Palestine Society Meets Wednesday

The Pioneer Women for Palestine will hold their closing luncheon of the season at the Roumanian Inn, Thirteenth and New York avenue northwest, Wednesday at 12:30 p. m. to mark the achievement of all club quotas.

Mrs. Eva Checkoway, of the New York executive office, and recently returned from Palestine, will be the guest of honor. Palestinian songs will be presented by Mrs. Saul Friedman. Mrs. Morris Pollin is in charge of arrangements.

Tomorrow night at 8:30, the Hanita Club of the Pioneer Women's organization, will hold a membership meeting at the home of Mrs. Albert Epstein, 6323 Ninth street northwest. Mrs. Checkoway will speak on present-day conditions in Palestine.

R. B. Stabler Takes Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brooke Stabler are on a motor trip in the South. On their return they will live at Hilltop Gardens, 6320 Fourteenth street.

The marriage of the former Miss Juliet Nicholson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lispenard Nicholson, took place at 4 p. m. Saturday in Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, Md., with the Rev. Dr. Spencer Dunbar officiating. Mr. Stabler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Stabler, of Sandy Spring, Md.

The bride wore a gown of white slipper satin with a high neckline, long sleeves and a court train. Her tulle veil was caught by a pearl tiara and a cluster of gardenias. She wore a lavaliere of turquoise and diamonds which had been worn by her mother at her wedding. Her bouquet was of gardenias and white roses.

Miss Mary Forest Nicholson, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a bouffant gown of white orangdie printed in flowers of larkspur blue and yellow. Her wide hat was of blue horsehair and she carried delphinium and Johanna Hill roses.

Burr M. Clark, of Chevy Chase, was best man. Leonard Lispenard Nicholson 3d and Flack Nicholson, brothers of the bride, were ushers. Also ushers were Hugh V. Stabler, brother of the bridegroom, and Thomas Bartram, his brother-in-law.

The couple, following a pleasant Friends' custom, had an impromptu reception on the steps of the church following the marriage service. Later a small reception was given for members of the bridal party and immediate families at Lenwill, the home of the bride's parents in Rockville. Assisting in receiving, the bride's mother wore a rose lace gown, while Mrs. Stabler had selected a flowered silk frock.

Out-of-town guests attending the ceremony included Mrs. Walter Carpenter, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Harris M. Crist, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Eno P. Campbell, of New Jersey; Mrs. George Worth, of Wayne, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Farquier and Miss Nancy Farquar, of Kennett Square, Pa.; Miss Alice Farquar, of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. Bentley Pope, of Trenton, N. J.

Longs Honor Mrs. Wilson At Luncheon

Miss Emily Davis Gives a Continuation Of the Coeleb Party

Luncheons, like the spring flowers, popped up all over twn as well as the nearby countryside, yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Long entertained a bevy of their friends at noon in honor of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Man Washingtonians drove down to Montpelier, the Longs' Laurel (Md.), estate, for the party

Miss Emily Davis gathered in a group of friends for luncheon as a sort of continuation of the Coeleb party given Saturday evening by members of that famous bachelor club. Attending the luncheon was Frank Hamilton, who flew dwn from Cincinnati to attend the dance, and ensueing festivities of the club, of which he is a member.

Later in the afternoon strains of banjo music and tenor voices, could be heard around Massachusetts avenue where Miss Stellita Stapleton was entertaining the same group in honr of Mr. Hamilton, who will return this morning to Cincinnati. Another out-of-town member, who came here for the festivities was Gordon Brown, of Buffalo.

Kauffmanns Attend

Arriving at the Stapleton residence for cocktails, guests remained to sit on the terrace, listen to the roving banjo-player and later enjoyed a buffet supper. A few attending, other than Coelebs, were Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. Godfry Kauffmann, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Miss Sylvia Szcheyni, Miss Nancy Glover and dozens of others.

Garretts Are Hosts

Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling entertained at a pleasant luncheon yesterday in honor of two debutantes, the Misses Isabel and Marjorie Meuser. After luncheon guests gathered in the garden of the Houghteling home. In town for a fleeting visit was Miss Margaret Houghteling who had with her a Vassar classmate, Miss Kathleen Rice, of St. Louis. Also down for the party was James Lawrence Houghteling, jr., who will return to his studies at Yale University today.

A jolly group of Washingtonians drove to the Virginia hunt country to lunch with Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett at their home in Middleburg. The party was given in honor of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Cardenas.

Also attending the Garrett luncheon were Count Emo and his son, Count Lorenzo Emo, and Miss Rebecca White, of Thomasville, Go. In the party also were Senora de Cardenas' brother-in-law, Clement Auffmordt, and his son, Douglas, a student at Ann Arbor, Mich. All of these are guests at the Spanish Embassy.

Constantinople Party Is Gay

One of the gayest parties over the week-end was given by Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Constantinople Saturday afternoon from 5 until 7 o'clock. The affair was, in effect, a housewarming for the Constantipoles have but recently completed their Spring Valley home which overlooks a glade, abloom with pink and white dogwood.

Receiving informally, Mrs. Constantinople wore a chic printed frock with brilliant clips at the neckline. Tea and coffee were served in the dining room but guests, for the most part, found their way to the punch bowl in the pine-paneled playroom downstairs. White lilacs accented with red tulips, adorned the drawing room, while an abundance of the traditional lavendar lilacs was used throughout the house.

A few who dropped in were the Ambassador of Turkey, Mehmet Ertegun; the Minister of Honduras, Dr. Don Julian R. Caceras; Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, the Commercial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Boncesco, and the Counselor of the Bolivian Legation, Don Raul Diez de Medina.

Mrs. Nell Dowling, sister of the hostess, assisted. Others there included Dr. and Mrs. Charles Tegge, Mrs. W. W. Bride, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Joslin, Mrs. Joseph Hogan, Dr. and Mrs. Archie Riddick, the Commercial Attache of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Dimitriu, and the Second Secretary of Rumanian Legation, Larry Bungardeanu.

Davises Are Hosts To Officers From Chilean Scholarship

A dozen or so Chilean naval officers enlivened the party given by Miss Dita Davis and her sister, Miss Barbara Davis, yesterday afternoon at the Arlington, Va., home of their parents, Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis.

When Col. and Mrs. Davis visited in Panama several years ago they met a number of officers in the Chilean navy, and were so delighted with them they decided to give a party for future admirals of that navy—the young officers who arrived here over the week-end from the training ship Madarigia.

It was an informal party with no receiving lines. Guests roamed over the spacious Davis house and wandered out onto the lawn, bright with spring flowers. The house was decked with dogwood, lilac and iris, all from the Davis garden. Miss Rita Davis, who made her debut last season, had donned a flowing black chiffon frock, while her sister Barbara wore a sea-foam green crepe dress with an elongated jacket to match. Mrs. Davis selected black chiffon, the waist of the frock being fashioned of white. Assisting at the punch bowl were Senora de Cabero, wife of the Ambassador from Chile, and Senora de Cortes, whose husband is the Naval Attache of the Chilean Embassy.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

A COSTUME PARTY is just the thing to take one's mind off of the woes of the world and to make one feel like living in some other century. This pleasant antidote was provided for their friends by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, when they entertained jointly at a costume dance Saturday night.

The scene of the party was the Howe's charming old Georgetown house, into which they moved this spring after extensive "doing over" by Mr Howe in the role of architect. A small orchestra furnished music for dancing in the two front drawing rooms. The dining room had been turned into a comfortable "sitting-out" corner with the added attraction of a buffet table, and the spacious and attractive kitchen made a congenial bar. A few hardy souls sat out in the walled garden, where a fishpond, grass plot and flower beds promised a charming spot for warmer evenings to come.

Mrs. Burling, in the costume of a dance hall girl of the Klondike period, reminded one of Marlene Dietrich, and indicated a distrust of banks by the $10 bill which showed through her sheer black stocking. Mrs. Howe wore a becoming black satin Pierrot costume, while Mr. Howe disguised himself with a false head, and Eddie Burling was an Eastern potentate.

THE PRIZE for the most amusing costume went to Lewis Clark disguised as a woman, but equally funny were Mr. and Mrs. John Hanes, whose costumes were composed of garments generally considered obsolete but which, they aver, can be bought in Washington department stores whose country clientele still loves the old-fashioned nightshirt.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Cortesi, of New York, were down for the party, he in Chinese dress topped by an Anthony Eden hat, and she in a pretty Balinese costume. Snowden Fahnestock was a natty beachcomber, with his smooth hair proving that the comb which hung around his neck on a string had been used on his own locks and not on the beach. Bea Fahnestock struck an elegant note in a gold harem costume and wore her auburn hair in curls, while Rebecca Wellington showed that she, too, was a redhead, at least at heart, by wearing red wig which was vastly becoming.

Probably the most authentic costume was the Japanese one of Baron James Baeyens, which had been made for him when he was stationed in Japan. It was perfect in every detail, even to the cloth shoes, which fitted like mittens and had a separate compartment for the great toe. Angus Malcolm was a bonny sight in his own Scotch kilt, the jacket trimmed with silver buttons and the shawl clasped with a splendid silver buckle.

Some of the prettiest ladies were Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, in a white peasant costume of modern Greece; Princess Hohenlohe, a Chinese girl with a flower in her hair; Mme. Lucet, as Carmen; Mrs. Samuel Spencer, in flounces of black lace and a Spanish mantilla; Mrs. Shaw Parker, in a spangled Mexican costume; Helen Davis, a lady of the "Gone-With-The-Wind" epoch; Mrs. Creighton Peet, in a pink Kate Greenaway outfit, and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, in a Venetian costume of black lace topped by a veiled tricorne.

OTHERS WHO helped by their attractive costumes and good spirits to make this one of the best parties of the year were Prince and Princess Leonide Onrusoff, he a desert sheik and she a flower-crowned peasant girl; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, he as a Mandarin with a fearsome mustache, she a summergirl in wide-brimmed hat and flowered gown; Stephanus Morris, a Guatemalan in a huge upturned hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyer Millar, Robert Coe, Joseph Alsop, Anne Perin, Samuel Reber, Andrew Wylie, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. Gray Poster, he a dashing Mexican, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, he perfectly disguised as a farmer with a beard until his expert steps in a rhumba gave away his identity.

Also gayly costumed were Mr. and Mrs. Thacher Winslow, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Keith Officer, Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker, Llewellyn Thompson and Robert Buell.

Collins Couple Hawaii Bound

Lieut. and Mrs. William R. Collins are en route to Hawaii following their marriage here on May 4. The bride, the former, Miss Mary Lee Griffith, is the daughter of Mrs. William Griffith. Lieut. Collins, U. S. M. C., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Collins.

The marriage took place at the Collins' home in Chevy Chase and a reception was given following the ceremony for a few intimate friends and relatives. The Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, of St. John's Church, officiated.

The bride wore a white gown of net trimmed in lace and a finger-tip veil. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. E. P. Hardell served as matron of honor for her sister. She wore a blue net ensemble and carried pink roses. W. Beaumont Clarkson was best man by proxy for the bridegroom's brother, Lieut. Ralph A. Collins, jr., U. S. M. C., who was unable to attend because of fleet maneuvers.

Out of town guests at the ceremony included Maj. and Mrs. Merrill B. Twining, Lieut. and and Mrs. Thomas Riley, Lieut and Mrs. John Masters; Lt and Mrs. Francis H. Cooper, Marine Gunner and Mrs. Carl J. Cagle, all of Quantico, Va., and Lieut. and Mrs. Peter Duplantis, of Norfolk, Va.

Writers Club to Hear Mrs. Tyler Tonight

The Professional Writers Club will hold its May meeting at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Y. W. C. A. administration building, with Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler as guest speaker. Mrs. Tyler, who is past president of the District group, League of American Pen Women, and editor of Blue Moon magazine, will speak on "Why Poetry?"

The business meeting preceding Mrs. Tyler's talk will be taken up primarily with election of new officers, who will assume their posts at the forthcoming June meeting.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Cast Off by Her Husband, Girl's Heart Is Numb; Crazy Thoughts Torment Her; She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your kindly handling of others' problems gives me courage to present my own . . . I am now staying with my sister and her husband, following a hurried departure from our apartment—my husband's and mine. My heart is numb. Crazy thoughts shoot around in my head. You see, my husband and I have definitely decided to part. Things have not been right between us for some time, and we talked it over last night. He says he doesn't love me any more; that he can live better without me.

Today, I learned he confided in my brother-in-law that he had so much responsibility he just couldn't keep me with him any longer. Yet he boasted to someone else about his good times out-of-town and his girl friends, and said he was tired of family life and intended to break away. This hurts terribly. Why couldn't he have come to me with his story, instead of discussing it with others behind my back?

I know he has responsibilities, but surely that isn't the reason for the break. He is trying to get his business started and he does contribute occasionally to the support of his mother, but I haven't complained. We are both young. I am 22 and he is 24. I am willing to build slowly. But he has got in with a crowd that likes to run around and I guess I am an obstacle in his path.

Everything I wanted in life seems to have gone. It is terrible when you lose confidence in someone you trusted for two years. What can I say to his mother, who has been so wonderful to me? And what shall I do about my husband? Somehow, I have failed. And I feel now that my life is over. Please advise me.

ABANDONED.

The Silver Lining In Today's Cloud

DEAR ABANDONED: You must keep your poise, not only because it is the gallant thing to do, but also because it is the healthful, remedial mental attitude with which to meet every emergency and reverse. Ernest Hemingway defines guts as "grace under pressure," and now is the time for you to prove you have the stuff of character to rise victorious over betrayal and heartbreak.

Though you are emotionally numb today from shock and shame, your "heart," so-called, will speedily resume its normal function and sensation if you accept what has happened as an inevitable denouement of a youthful mistake in judgment. You remark, "Somehow, I have failed." Your only failure, I think, was in misjudging the boy to be a dependable, honorable, responsibly minded man—when in reality he is a flighty adolescent who got married on the crest of a wave of infatuation which obviously spent itself long ago.

He is guilty of extreme vulgarity of behavior in discussing his flirtations and marital discontent behind your back; and in view of your sensitive self-respect—so sorely wounded by his low-bred defection—you should welcome the breath-taking turn of events which promise to deliver you from intimate affiliation with him. Remember Tennyson's words in Locksley Hall: "As the husband is, the wife is. Thou art mated with a clown and the grossness of his nature shall have weight to drag thee down."

Every cloud has a silver lining, it is said, and in breaking with you—even though against your will at this time—he is conferring upon you a greater boon than you realize just now. He is obliging you to quit this whited sepulcher of marriage and build anew with better materials—a move you probably never would have found the courage to make on your own initiative, no matter what convincing reports of his disloyalty filtered through to your ears.

In months and years to come, when this now-painful experience has become a memory, you will clearly see your husband's "break" as the best thing that could have happened, under the circumstances. You will acknowledge it to have been a "break," indeed, in the slangy best sense of the word.

As for what to say to his mother—tell her the truth insofar as you know it, frankly and simply, without hysteria or resentment. And as for what to do about your husband—let him go without a murmur of protest. Don't try to hang on to what is over and done with. The open-handed gesture of freely relinquishing is identical with the gesture of freely receiving and, as one philosopher observes, "When half gods go, the gods arrive." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Wirte her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Make Curtains For Spring

DELIGHTFULLY springlike, are tiered curtains of plain and flowered voile, gaily bordered with lace in "tatting" design.

You make them easily and inexpensively, too—using a shimmery blue voile flowered in shell pink and blue for the curtain itself. Or would you prefer yellow dotted swiss with apple green?

The two lower flounces you cut 12 inches deep, 2 inches of which is allowed for overhang. The top flounce you make 14 inches deep—allowing for a rod casing and frill.

So the flounces will be perkily full, cut each from two to three times as long as the width of the finished curtain. Finish edges with narrow lace or a tiny hem. Then gather ruffles and sew to a foundation of blue voile, as the diagram shows. To keep flounces from curling back, tack them lightly to the sides of the foundation.

For full lovely folds in the lower part of your curtain, use a double thickness of material. Stitch sides together, but finish the bottoms separately. Gather and attach to the ruffle foundation—and what a charming effect you have!

In our 40-page booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," you find diagrams, step-by-step directions for glass curtains, draperies of every type. Gives professional pointers on fabrics, finishes, trimmings—on making smart valances, cornices, swags, jabots, pretty tie-backs and holdbacks.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Beauty and Budget Meet in Fashions

New York (AP).—Beauty and the budget meet in this year's commencement fashion tale.

The frocks high school and college graduates will wear are both smart and inexpensive.

Besides that they are designed to do double duty. They're cut to meet the demands of good taste in commencement frocks and designed to skim over the dance floor at summer parties later. The secret is in the cut of necklines, sleeves and skirts.

The frocks are made of both sheer and heavy white materials—Swiss organdy, mousseline de soie, dotted Swiss, pique and such—and generally trimmed either with lace or eyelet embroidery.

For Avid Print Collectors

A cool, genteel print for now under a light dark coat, and later on "as is" for blistering days in town. This print is of especial interest to print collectors since it is one of those now rare pure silk French Bianchinis, made along simple figure-flattering lines. The colors, a dainty lavender and grey, the waistline smocked for a diminishing optical illusion. That plain neckline is a boon to jewelry collectors, too.

Science Finds Way to Soften Foot Shocks

Cellulose Innersole Is Boon to Visitors To World's Fair

The Post Fashion Editor.

"SIDEWALK SHOCK," the bugbear of the foot fashion world, is about to be thwarted. Just as thousands of women have started to worry over the prospects of World's Fair feet upon the reopening of Flushing Meadow this week, along comes the announcement that a new insulation process has been created to do away with "burning feet." with "burning feet."

The complaints of World's Fair marathoners last year caused chemists to start working on a panacea for foot fatigue. It has long been believed that the pressure of pavement pounding and the penetration of heat and cold could be relieved if a normal foot temperature could be maintained. The fact that Vincent DeLiso, nationally known creator of high style shoes, has an air conditioning solution should be good news to all prospective vacationers.

The new DeLiso tested innersole is a synthetic called Onco Insole-ated, an organic cellulose substance, which, when given every possible shock absorption test on the nervous system, comes up smiling. Mr. DeLiso is even now building his fall shoe collection around this practical innersole, which is also flexible and light weight. The DeLiso family dates back four generations to the royal Italian booters who, in 1898, were presented a diamond-crowned sword by Queen Margharita in recognition of their craftsmanship.

A word of warning. Wear really comfortable shoes this year to the fair or any other place where feet are put in action. Just as a matter of statistics, 90 per cent of the American women suffer from "hurty feet," most of which trouble stems from vanity. A trained shoe clerk's advice should never be disregarded if he fits you in a 6½ A, even though you "know" you can wear a 5 B. Don't be dismayed either if you are given a different size in a different style, since some of the smart low-heeled footwear measures a full size or two less than a high-heeled pump. A final footnote—kidskin is considered the most comfortable of all shoe materials due to its pliability, softness and tiny pores.

New Ways For Sandwiches

To pep up your favorite sandwich fillings, add flavored butters. They are easy to make. Mash and whip with a fork, ¼ cup butter and beat into the butter 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, for ham and cheese sandwiches, or 1 tablespoon minced parsley, for spiced meat fillings; a few drops onion and lemon juice for fish; 1 teaspoon tomato catsup and ½ teaspoon horseradish for sliced cold meat.

Further allure may be added to fresh bread and butter sandwiches by cutting the sandwiches into rounds or other fancy shapes with cookie cutters, then toast them in the oven.

Claret Adds Artful Flavoring to Pot Roast

WINE seems to work magic on some meats. A pot roast that uses red wine to enhance its flavor is a dish that deserves special mention. A dry red wine like Claret or Begundy will bring out the flavor of meat, and the cup of red wine used to replace part of the liquid you ordinarily add to pot roast or stew adds an artful flavoring.

Pot Roast With Wine

The day before the pot roast is to be cooked, buy a solid piece of lean beef, rump, chuck or shoulder from 3 to 4 pounds. Place meat in a deep bowl, and add 1½ cups Claret wine, 2 large onions sliced, 1 sliced lemon, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, 12 whole black peppers and 1 teaspoon ginger, if desired. Let stand 18 to 24 hours in a cold place, turning occasionally. Remove meat from liquid, drain thoroughly, then brown in 2 tablespoons hot fat in a heavy kettle. Add the wine in which meat was soaked, cover kettle and let simmer 3 to 4 hours, adding a little water if it begins to cook dry. When tender, lift meat out, and strain remaining liquid. In the kettle melt 2 tablespoons fat, stir in 2 tablespoons flour and brown lightly. Add the liquid and cook, stirring until slightly thickened. If too thick, thin with hot water to desired consistency. Add more salt if needed, put meat back into gravy and heat 5 minutes longer. Serve sliced on hot platter, pouring gravy over roast. Serves 8 to 12.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 12.

"LAST SUNDAY night," whispers old Jeth Hall, spouse of above, "the madame hoisted me into the wheel-chair and pushed me off to the opening of Mr. Billy Rose's new show at his Diamond Horse Shoe night club. I still don't feel pert, for that is certainly one of the noisiest and brightest things I ever see."

ALICE HUGHES

This little Rose is the undisputed boss of such entertainments. Their pace is the fastest, music the loudest and girls the prettiest to be found anywhere, these days. Well, it was a sight to see Broadway's aristocracy, gathered there at midnight. Mr. Jack Benny doing a sedate fox-trot with his Mary Livingston, with the Easy Aces helping him represent radio, and you couldn't have wafted a hard roll without beaning some newspaper funnyman like Bugs Baer, or some great American mother like Ida Cantor, or some old star like Fritzi "Kees Me Again" Scheff whirling in a mad waltz.

Rose specializes in the old-timers for these Diamond Horse show things. This time he has Blanche Ring doing three numbers, and the famous female impersonator, Julian Eltinge, popping from retirement, and old Eddie Leonard, the minstrel man. He was billed as "the grand old man" when I was a toddler in Cleveland, yet here the venerable bird is, still singing "Ida" in a cracked voice. Of course, there's a mess of first-class youth, too.

SPOUSE ABOUT TOWN—But I got up out of my chair and stomped loud when Gilda Gray came out—the Milwaukee girl who grew into the greatest shimmy dancer of all time. I remember my governess carrying me in to see her in "The Follies of 1923," and when she sang and shook to "Neath the South Sea Island Moon" I sat right up on nursie's lap and hollered in a bass voice. Remarkable girl, Gilda. Once when I was on a paper in Washington I introduced her to a woman's club. I suppose they expected to see this vulgar show girl get up and make a chump of herself. But this shake artist was beautifully dressed in perfect taste, and made as perfect a little speech as I ever heard. I sure was proud of the shimmy star that day!

Jimmy Walker, the former mayor, is still king of Broadway society, with his pretty showgirl wife, Betty Compton, as queen. It doesn't matter that his term of office found the town in its most corrupt state, and that he left the job under a black cloud. What does Broadway care? He's the dream boy of the street, as it would like to be itself—slim, sleek, glib, fast-cracking and sporty. He'll always be mayor of Broadway—little Mr LaGuardia is just a hard working little showman who has done more for the town than any boss in its history.

Business Men Urged to Keep Bodies Fit

Physical Trainer Neatly Summarizes Deductions in Book

By Ida Jean Kain

THE AVERAGE businessman is not particularly concerned about living to a hale 90 and patriarchism. What he wants is to stay 15 rounds in the ring of finance and to keep on savoring the ups, downs and thrills.

In his office as physical trainer to many of the Hollywood financial wizards—who are supposed to be peerless in juggling dollars and cents to make fortunes—Terry Hunt has had ample opportunity to observe their ways and means of realizing ambition. His deductions are neatly summarized in a book called "Exercise to Keep Fit." Without wasting words, he might have added, "For Fighting!"

If you talk to yourself, find noise unbearable, suffer from insomnia, or feel despondent for no reason whatever, Mr. Hunt urges that you lose no time in consulting a competent phychiatrist! Then you will feel more confidence in resuming the health precautions you have been neglecting for years.

Body Needs Toning

But, to begin at the beginning, Mr. Hunt finds that most businessmen concentrate on their jobs to the exclusion of everything else . . . that is the reason they become restless, nervous, taut and hard to live with. The general tendency is to work harder, to play less, and to concentrate more and more upon one narrow aim until one becomes "haywire."

And while relaxation may strike the individual as "fiddling while Rome burns," that is exactly what is needed in most cases. The relaxation should, of course, include the right kind of exercise, so that the body is toned and there is a perceptible increase in the ability to deal with difficulties.

The best recreation is the competitive game, which not only tones the muscles but also takes the mind off business for awhile. This includes golf, tennis, badminton or whatever you like to compete at. You can actually prolong your usefulness in business by playing golf two or three times a week.

Exercises Favored

But if for some reason or other you are unable to engage in competitive games, you must resort to calisthenics—even as the movie wizards—to keep yourself fit: Here are two favored by this physical trainer because they get results:

POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor with the legs straight down and arms down at sides.

MOVEMENT: Flex the knees and raise the entire body off the floor, supporting the weight on heels and head. Relax, repeat for 10 times.

POSITION: Lie on the floor face downward, legs straight down and arms down at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Raise head and heels off the floor simultaneously. Hold, relax for a second, repeat.

There are any number of these trunk strengthening exercises.

Time to Fight Moth Invasion

It's time to prepare to fight home invasions from our spring weather enemies, moth larvae.

As a first step, the homemaker should make sure that not only closets, but everything in them is clean, free from dust, odors and dirt. Shelves should be washed with soap and water and cracks between floor boards thoroughly scrubbed, as this is a favorite place to deposit eggs. It is important that each garment be cleaned before hanging it back or storing it away, since soil and body odors, however slight, are to these pests what a partridge scent is to a bird dog.

A tar paper bag which closes tightly is one of the best protectors for your fur or cloth coat after it has been cleaned, according to the research chemist. But a clean cloth bag that has been rubberized or otherwise treated to make it impermeable with a zipper fastening is also excellent provided you are sure it is clean and does not contain eggs or larvae from last season.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

The Next President

"What do you think of Whiffle?"

"Imagine HER in the White House!"

"She's no worse than Mrs. Scallop."

"Oh, well, she—I mean he hasn't a chance anyway."

"I don't know—they say he makes a wonderful speech on the farm problem."

"But if the voters ever see her——"

"Wait, now! She probably would appeal to the rural element."

"Oh, they're not so dumb any more. She wouldn't get by even in the corn belt with those $1.95 hats."

ooo

"Well, of course, the big issue anyway will be the war."

"Yes, and that's where Tooner's going to pile up a big vote."

"The whole thing is, though—she hasn't any social presence. Imagine her entertaining foreign diplomats!"

"Well, now, for that, nobody could beat Juliet Chaff."

"I know . . . still . . . wasn't there once a lot of talk about Juliet and some embassy attache?"

"I believe there was something—still he has a lot of money behind him."

"I know, but—well, in a campaign people always dig up those things."

"Yes, but after all he's the one who's running."

"I know, but then you know how the voters are. They always confuse the issues."

ooo

"George says Lush will be the next President."

"That woman! Why, she doesn't know anything but bridge!"

"She's real sweet, though. And he has a marvelous flow of English."

"Oh, she's a nice enough little woman—if all you want is an ornament."

"I suppose it's what the men with the money want. At least, she'd be safe."

"She could never make the grade at Chicago—in those flowered prints . . . and those bubble necklaces. You know how the Republicans are . . .

"Well, if its a matter of clothes, Barbara Twitty has the nomination—that is, he has."

"She's too snooty."

"But he's so much for the underdog——"

"I tell you the farm women would never stand for her."

ooo

"Of course, it'll probablly be a dark horse in the end—at least at Chicago."

"Yes, and I wouldn't be surprised to see them turn to Jitney."

"She's awfullly common looking—from her pictures."

"But they say she's very pleasant—and he has a wonderful radio voice."

"She can't talk at all. Anyway, she's not the type of woman to follow Mrs. Roosevelt."

"Well, it does look as if they could find a woman somewhere who was smart and goodlooking——"

"Yes, and who had the right background."

"And was democratic."

"And knew how to wear clothes——"

"And who would photograph well——"

"Yes, and who had personality——"

"And some brains."

"And a radio voice——"

"Of course. And lots of tact——"

"And good horse sense——"

"Well, in fact, everything."

"Yes. But how many women can you think of like that?"

"We-l-l, not very many. Now, isn't that strange?"

"You know what I think's the matter with this country? . . . We just don't develop enough women for public life."

"That's exactly it! More mothers really ought to raise their daughters to be Presidents——"

"You mean Presidents' wives."

"Yes, of course."

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

It is called "rose fever," because it comes when the roses are blooming. Some people have it and some people don't. Some of those who have it refer to it as "my spring cold."

It was not until John Bostock, the Englishman, experimented on his own case that the guilty parties were found not to be the roses, but the grasses. John Bostock published his observations over 100 years ago, but nobody paid any attention to them until just lately.

It is natural for the rose fever victim to ascribe his trouble to the roses, because when he smells the roses he is liable to get an attack. But this is merely because the sticky petals and stamens of the rose hold the wind-blown pollen of the grasses, and when the victim is even in the room with the roses, the effluvia effects the mucous membrane of his nose.

The grasses which are responsible and the time of their blooming are as follows:

May 17, blue grass; May 17, rye; May 27, orchard grass; May 27, wheat; June 15, timothy; June 10, cattail, and July 1-30, corn.

The treatment may be either palliative or preventive. By palliative treatment is meant the treatment of symptons by nasal sprays and eye drops. This we will deal with in an article later on in the season when symptoms are likely to be acute.

Preventive treatment consists in the use of pollen vaccines. It should start some time before the season begins. That is why I am drawing attention to it now.

The procedure as carried out by the modern doctor who is interested in allergy is to determine exactly what grass the victim is sensitive to. The principle upon which this diagnosis rests is that the skin is very sensitive to the chemicals of the pollen, and when a solution of the pollen is made and injected into the skin, or rubbed into the skin, there will be a red and inflammatory area of considerable size. Several different pollens are rubbed in at the same time and the ones which show the largest wheal are those against which treatment is directed.

After the offending pollen is identified, hypodermic injections of weak dilutions of the pollen solution are made, growing stronger every week so that finally by the time the season opens, the patient will have acquired an immunity and can get through the season with little or no discomfort.

It is possible to give this preventive treatment coseasonally, that is, beginning at the time the symptoms begin. My own experimence has been that this vaccine treatment is more effective to use against the spring type of hay fever than against the fall or ragweed type.

11,577,000 Idle in U. S., C. I. O. Reports

3 Billion Urged To Revive Farm Aid, PWA, FHA Programs

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, reporting 11,577,000 persons unemployed, last night called for cessation of dependence on growing exports to increase production and employment.

At the same time Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, announced a new drive to revive the public works, federal housing and farm aid programs with a $3,000,000,000 fund.

Voorhis said he will offer a bill today to provide the money by taking $1,500,000,000 each from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and the "now idle and unused silver seigniorage" fund.

The C. I. O. estimate appeared in the organization's publication, the Economic Outlook, which said the index of industrial production "is continuing to drop slowly" and is expected to reach "about 101 on the Federal Reserve Board index for April, compared to a revised level of 103 for Marsh."

C. I. O. Figures

The 11,577,000 unemployed figure was termed "a reduction of less than 2.5 per cent from the revised February figure of 11,871,000."

"There are no domestic factors apparent or in prospect which gives promise of starting a substantial upward movement in industrial production."

The Outlook cautioned against dependence on exports to improve economic conditions, because:

"It withdraws attention from domestic policies for the improvement of employment and production.

"It creates false hopes that the growth of war exports will provide a stimulus to domestic industry sufficient to raise it from its present low level.

"It leads to a desire for measures for extending credit to belligerents and for shipping American goods abroad into war areas in American ships."

Funds for 3 Agencies

Voorhis' bill would make available $1,000,000,000 each to the PWA, for works' loans to cities and States; the FHA for home construction loans up to 45 per cent of the cost, and for modernization loans; and the Agriculture Department for loans for purchase of equipment or improvement of land and buildings, to encourage settlement on reclamation project lands, and loans to tenants for purchase of land.

The United States Housing Authority, in support of legislation to double its lending authority of $800,000,000, said in a statement last night that jobs for about 1,000,000 workers in building trades and allied industries would be provided if all unfilled requests for low-rent housing loans were granted.

The USHA said its requests totaled $1,006,900,000, and that it could not act on them until Congress granted the additional authority.

Retires to Enjoy Her Old Age

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, who was 11 April 23, has been retired by old age with a fortune estimated at $3,000,000. Shirley, through her mother, canceled her film contract and settled down to the sixth grade of grammar school. She said she didn't feel old; she just guessed she looked that way

New York Train Collision Injures 250

By the Associated Press

Port Jervis, N. Y., May 12.—About 250 persons yere injured today, most of them superficially, when one of five Erie Railroad special trains carrying International Business Machine employes to the New York World's Fair crashed into the rear car of another.

Many of the injured resumed the trip on another train after they were treated at hospitals, physicians' offices and drugstores. Several remained in Port Jervis hospitals, but their injuries were reported not critical.

One of the special trains, en route from Endicott, N. Y., to the fair for "I. B. M. Day" tomorrow, was standing in the station here when the special directly behind crashed into it.

The railroad said the second train apparently had run through a signal.

About 50 slightly injured passengers were treated on arrival at New Yok City.

Two hundred I. B. M. employes and their friends from Washington left at 5:30 a. m. yesterday by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the fair. Their route was apart from that on which other I. B. M. employes experienced the wreck.

Dixie G. O. P. Leader Backs Vandenberg

By the Associated Press

Aides of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, announced yesterday that J. Sam White, of North Carolina, regional director for the Republican program committee in eight Southeastern States, had indorsed Vandenberg for the party's Presidential nomination.

"At this time of crisis in international affairs, his wide experience and knowledge and leadership are vitally important," said a telegram from White. "I confidently expect his nomination at Philadelphia and his election in November."

Another development was a formal statement by Representative Chiperfield (Republican), of Illinois, that Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, the House Republican leader, would be "an ideal fusion candidate" to break a convention deadlock, which he said appeared to be in the making.

Taft-for-President forces announced that Mrs. Martha B. Taft, wife of Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, was leaving the Capital on a two-weeks' tour to address Republican women's groups in Arizona, California, Nevada and Utah.

Barney House To Present Play

More than 100 children in the Southwest area will participate in the thirty-eighth annual spring festival at the Barney Neighborhood House on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Each night "The Pirate's Daughter," a play of old Holland, will be given in the gardens adjoining the Settlement House at 470 N street northwest. The cast is of 50 boys and girls from the music classes, clubs and folk-dancing groups of Barney House.

Among the entertainments will be a concert at 4:30 o'clock Saturday by the United States Marine Band. Proceeds will be used for materials and equipment for the settlement classes.

Churches Join In Tribute To Mother

Special Services Held; Social Functions Also On Program

Mothers were honored yesterday in a round of worship services and social functions in the city's churches.

Masses and special breakfasts marked the Catholic observance, while Protestant churches sponsored confirmations, baptisms, dedications, receptions for new members, teas and other programs.

War mothers and others attending services were reminded of the troubulous times, and their lot contrasted with that of mothers of duty-called sons abroad.

St. Patrick's Service

More than 500 members of the Catholic Police and Firemen's Society, mingling at breakfast at the Willard Hotel after attending early mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, heard District Attorney Edward M. Curran salute mothers who teach children parental respect and obedience, stressing that such an attitude brings respect, honor and obedience for the law.

"It would be most difficult to mention any achievements of man without involving the love of a self-sacrificing mother," he said, "for I feel that men could not have accomplished what they have, had they not had the undivided support of maternal love, care and guidance."

His mother, Mrs. Michael J. Curran, seated nearby, listened as he asserted that "you mothers have the faith and the elements of moral culture, and in your veins is the blood which in other lands and other centuries has nourished the spirit of martyrs, heroes and saints."

"Undying loyalty to this great land of ours is producing a rich heritage, and sacrifices made by our forbears will bear the fruits they intended, and America will be a haven of happiness, far removed from the maddening hate and alarms of the other side," he concluded.

Other speakers were Representative Edward J. Hart (Democrat), of New Jersey; Lewis B. Nichols, of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; the Rev. Thomas B. Dade, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's and spiritual adviser of the society; William R. Cryer, its president; Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, the Rev. Hirl Kester, and others.

Celebrates Mass

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore, celebrated the mass, which was preceded by a procession from the Knights of Columbus Hall on Tenth street, led by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, and the police drill team. Policemen and firemen ushered and served the mass.

The congregation of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, Fourth street and North Carolina avenue southeast, honored the institution of motherhood by dedicating its new nursery, to be used by children of people attending services.

Miss Rose Moffatt, superintendent of the Homeopathic Hospital obstetrical department, is supervisor. Dr. Warren D. Bowman, pastor, who consecrated several children, is a recognized authority on church and home relationships often counseling couples on marriage.

Dedication of 22 new membrial windows took place at Eldbrooke Methodist Church, River road and Wisconsin avenue northwest. Mothers, special guests, were pictured as "windows of heaven" by Dr. Walter M. Michael, pastor.

Members of the Postoffice Branch of the Holy Name Society remembered "her" at services of mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, with Dr. John K. Cartwright, rector, as celebrant, and Dr. John Tracy Ellis, of Catholic University, preacher. They later rode to Pilgrim's Hall, on the Franciscan Monastery grounds, for breakfast. Holy Name Societies of Immaculate Conception, Holy Name and other churches also sponsored appropriate rites.

Ladies of the Chapel Guild of the Army Medical Center presented a church flag at special services there. Mrs. Robert E. Ridenhour, Mrs. Elizabeth Gordon and Mrs. Florence A. Latham, respectively, national president, vice president and secretary of the American War Mothers, spoke.

Christmas Hymn Sung

Because its nativity theme seemed so fitting for such an occasion, a Christmas hymn was sung at Foundry Methodist Church's morning services, conducted from a garden-like setting on the rostrum, where one candle flickered in memory of departed mothers.

His voice emotion choked, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor, asked in his devotions that blessings be showered upon the mothers of sons of all embattled nations. His scriptural reading expressed confidence in the ultimate triumph of righteousness, despite the present dark outlook.

District American War Mothers prayed together at Universalist National Memorial Church; Spanish-American War Veterans staged their annual Mother's Day commemoration last night at Metropolitan Baptist Church, and Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church staged a pageant depicting mothers of all types—from rugged pioneer to reverent pilgrim.

Five generations gathered at Takoma Luthern Church, Seventh and Dahlia streets northwest, for the baptism of 8-weeks-old Frances Elaine Baus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Baus, of 811 Kennebec street, Takoma Park, Md.

Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, Baptist Young People's Union and other youth societies invited mothers to church teas late in the afternoon, and heard inspirational messages from clergymen and others.

Fathers and Sons, Mothers and Daughters Mark Mother's Day

British United In Facing War, Says Editor

Pacifists Number Only 2%, Dr. Albert Peel Tells Congregationalists

The "striking unanimity' of the British people as they face the present conflict, and their grim determination to "go through with it," were pictured here last night by Dr. Albert Peel, editor of the British Congregationalist Quarterly.

Even the pacifists in churches and universities feel there is no way to resist force except by force, realizing that the "totalitarian menace" threatens all that is best in life and must be opposed, he said at First Congregational Church.

Pacifists represent only 2 per cent of the men registered, he said, explaining that conscientious objectors are receiving fair treatment before tribunals.

Experiences resulting from blackouts, evacuations, etc., are breaking down traditional conservatism in many quarters, he said, indicating that was a hopeful sign for the country's future.

Describing his visit to British and French soldiers, he told how chaplains of different denominations and nations were working harmoniously together in increasing church unity. His visit there was as chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales.

Dr. Peel was presented by Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor. Sixty Eastern High School students, directed by Paul De Long Gable, organist at First Congregational Church, sang.

Speaker in scores of churches and universities since coming to America in January, Dr. Peel expressed keen disappointment because the war caused cancelation of an international Congregationalist conference slated for June at Wellesley College.

Coroner to Probe Deaths of 2 Here

The coroner's office today planned to determine what caused the death of two persons here yesterday.

R. L. Livingston, 32, of 3432 Lowell street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital April 30 for poisoning, and later attended at home by a private physician. A graduate of Western High School and National Law School, Livingston was employed in the District assessor's office. He leaves a wife, Shelby; one son, Robert Lee 3d; his mother, Mrs. Alice Livingston, and a brother, Brice H. Livingston.

Relatives found Hampton G. Bayliss, 47, of Baltimore, dead behind the wheel of an auto in a cellar-garage at the home of his sister, Mrs. Catherine Tatum, 825 Kentucky avenue southeast.

Joker's Idea: Mother Told Son Is Killed

Policemen Notify Victims of Hoax Of Fake Crash

Someone with a perverted sense of humor yesterday scraped the bottom in practical jokes for Mother's Day.

He had police notify one Washington mother her son was dead in an automobile accident; another that her boy was critically injured. To intensify its cruelty, he placed the fake accident in Fredericksburg, Va., and left the two mothers frantically trying to learn something from a nonexistent Fredericksburg policeman.

Yesterday at 7:30 a. m. Washington police received a call from a man who described himself as Policeman A. C. Wheeler, of Fredericksburg, and who said Leroy C. Lumsden, 21, of 1211 Thirty-fourth street northwest, was killed and Stanley C. Gray, 34, of 1515 Thirty-fourth street, critically hurt. Their parents were notied.

It was not until afternoon that the two young men were located in Washington and unharmed. Police investigated then and learned there is no A. C. Wheeler on the Fredericksburg police force and that the telephone call had been placed locally.

Fathers, Sons, 800 Strong, Honor Mothers at Dinner

Fathers and sons, 800 strong, gathered at the Mayflower Hotel last night to celebrate the name of mother with dinner and radio, sports and vaudeville celebrities, while nearly 200 mothers and daughters dined at the Brighton Hotel at the same time with less professional entertainment.

Both dinners were held under the auspices of the Washington Hebrew Congregation. A temporary blackout failed to break up the Mayflower gathering. Candles were lighted and songs sung until light was restored.

District Attorney Edward Curran paid tribute to mothers in a brief address at the father and son banquet. "Mothers have the faith and the elements of moral culture." he declared.

Tracing the development of Mother's Day, he said: "The influence of mother is the greatest in all the world, greater than that of ambition and of power and of passion. She stands, as since the beginning she has stood, high-crowned with reverence and love, above emperors and glories, above the lure of all mortal desires."

In the atmosphere of a Western rodeo, with soft drinks flowing fast, entertainers kept up a rapid-fire program for the assembled fathers and sons. Movies, gagsters, dancers and singers, with a smattering of cowboys and Indians were all featured.

Radio stars present included Gordon Hittenmark, Tony Wakeman, Bill Coyle, Art Brown and Arch McDonald. Sports celebrities were Clark Griffith, George Marshall, Jack Espey, Kirk Miller, Bernie Harter, Charlie Malone, Don Irwin, "Dutch" Bergman, Jack Hagerty, Bill Reinhart, Turk Edwards, Andy Farkas, Jim Meade, Maurice Dubofsky, Ray Flaherty, Jim Berryman and Geary Eppley.

A message was read from J. Edgar Hoover, who was unable to attend the gathering. His message read in part:

"Without a superior stalwart national citizenship, everything is insecure . . . The times through which we are passing are times of great importance, and never before has the need been so apparent as it is today constantly to be vigilant of the forces that will encroach uponn our cherished liberties."

Vaudeville performers included members of troupes from Warner's Earle Theater and Loew's Capitol Theater. Cantor Abrasha Robofsky offered vocal selections. Motion picture comic shorts were shown. The opening prayer was delivered by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld.

Sponsors include Allen V. de Ford and Sidney Hechinger, cochairmen; Charles B. Dulcan, sr., David Bornet, Edward Ostrow, Morris Simon, William Illch, Harry Viner, Eugene Young, Col. Julius I. Peyser, Herman Norwood, Sherry Stein, Louis Janof, Stanford Abel, Bernard Wilner, Benjamin Ourisman, Edward Rosenbloom, Maury Young and Harold Strauss.

At the Brighton Hotel the mothers and daughters were entertained with songs and dancing and a Punch and Judy show. Mrs. Sidney Lutz was chairman of the affair. Fifteen lucky prizes were given away.

Barbara Saloman, 11, received the first prize of a puppy for the best essay on "What my mother means to me." Her essay was in verse. Second prize went to Betty Beckenstein, 14, for her essay.

Gun-Shy Bandit

A couple of girls with loads of nerve and a lawyer's insistence on evidence last night foiled an attempted holdup by a robber who refused to produce a gun.

The girls, 21-year-old Dorothy Brown, and Katherine Everhart, are clerks at the High's ice cream store at 1374 H street northeast. When a colored man entered the store and, hand menacingly in pocket, ordered the girls to open the cash drawer, they refused.

"Open it yourself," retorted Miss Brown.

"Show us your gun," demanded Miss Everhart.

Harbor Police Rescue Sailboat Skipper and Crew

Harbor police are shown alongside the sailboat of Judge Prentice E. Edrington, shown in the water, after the boat capsized in a race yesterday in Washington Channel. Three of the crew picked up were Virginia Glaze Brook, Thomas Craner and James Webb. Judge Edrington and the same crew capsized in the same race last year

Capt. Branson Conducts Band At Georgetown

Responding to the baton of the veteran band leader, Capt. Taylor Branson, U. S. M. C., retired, a Georgetown University students' band closed its fifth annual music festival last night on the Hilltop campus with a burst of martial airs.

An audience that crowded the college quadrangle gave the former Marine Band director an ovation as he took the baton from Dr. Marlin S. Reichley, Georgetown conductor, after the intermission of the concert. After conducting "The Halls of Montezuma" and "Semper Fidelis," so long associated with the Marine Band which he led for 13 years, Capt. Taylor turned to the audience and said:

"It is a great privilege for me to conduct this Georgetown Band. It takes me back many years. Now we'll play for an encore, the greatest march ever written, 'The Stars and Stripes Forever,' by John Philip Sousa."

Capital News In Brief

Yegg's Tools Hunted

Police and Sewer Department employes today will push an expedition into the old sewer at Eighth street and Florida avenue northwest in search of two chisels and a hammar.

The instruments, police said, were used April 20 to force a safe in the offices of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Co., 717 Florida avenue northwest. The cracksman escaped with $1,043.

Yesterday, Detective Sergts. Michael Mahaney and Curtis Trammell arrested a 25-year-old former janitor and said they recovered part of the loot. The suspect, police said, confessed to the robbery and told where he had hidden the chisels and hammer.

Thugs Get Meal Ticket

Three colored men dragged him into an alley and robbed him of his billfold containing $7 and a meal ticket early yesterday morning, Walter L. White, 811 Fifth street northwest, told police.

The robbery took place in the 800 block of Fifth street northwest. An 18-year-old colored boy was held for investigation.

Early yesterday a man broke into the apartment of Keeth L. Leeka, 1814 Minnesota avenue southeast, and escaped with a handbag containing $7 and a pair of trousers containing $5. Both the handbag and trousers were found by police in front of the house—minus the money.

Three Times and Out

Firemen were called out three times in a row yesterday afternoon to extinguish fires within a few blocks of each other.

No sooner had the firemen doused the flames in the sheds at the rear of 492-4-6 F street southwest, when they were called to a fence fire in the rear of 606-8-10 Sixth street southwest. A few minutes later the third alarm proved to be a fence burning at the rear of 806 G street southwest. Police are investigating.

G. K. Shearer, Drug Official, Killed in Crash

Peoples' Treasurer Dozed at Wheel; Wife Cut, Loses Finger

George K. Shearer, 52, treasurer and director of store operations of the Peoples Drug Stores, was killed yesterday when his automobile overturned on Route No. 3 near York, Pa. He lived at 4801 Connecticut avenue northwest.

G. K. Shearer

His wife, Mrs. Mabel Shearer, suffered loss of a finger, severe lacerations, a possible nose fracture and shock. They were rushed by passersby to Harrisburg Hospital, where Shearer was pronounced dead on arrival.

Members of the Pennsylvania Motor Patrol said Shearer, who had relieved his wife at the wheel at York shortly before, apparently fell asleep. The automobile plunged from the road, overturned and came to rest back on the roadway upside down and headed in the opposite direction. Shearer was hurled 25 feet. Mrs. Shearer was pinned inside the car.

A native of York, Shearer attended Cornelll University and was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. He entered the drug business of N. H. Shearer & Co., a Pennsylvania chain founded by his father, with headquarters at York. When the Shearer firm was bought by Peoples in 1926, Shearer was made director of all store operations.

He had offered his resignation, effective June 1, and had expected to spend his retirement at his rural home near Yorktown, Pa., where he was going when he was killed. Shearer served in the Army during the World War. He was a member of the Elks and of the Singleton Lodge of Masons.

Symphony Drive Workers to Give 2d Report Today

Volunteer workers in the campaign for the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund will hold their second report luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. at the Carlton Hotel. The orchestra is seeking $107,600, of which $46,626.28 already has been pledged.

Guests of honor at the luncheon will be members of the campaign's government committee, of which Edward J. Noble, Undersecretary of Commerce, is chairman.

19 Injured By Traffic In D. C. Area

Girl, 5, Struck Playing in Street; Mother, Daughter Hurt in Collision

Heavy traffic yesterday resulted in injuries to 19 persons in Washington and nearby areas.

Five-year-old Barbara Fletcher, of 204 Tenth street southeast, was treated for head injuries at Casualty Hospital after she was struck by an auto while playing near her home. The driver, Roy G. Wildman, 508 B street northeast, was charged with reckless driving at the Fifth Precinct station.

A chase through Hyattsville, Md., at a rate police estimated at 60 miles per hour resulted in a cut lip and a reckless driving charge for Thurman McKlein, jr., 20, colored, 95 McKinley avenue, Hyattsville, when his auto slammed into a concrete wall on Bladensburg road. McKlein was caught by Motorcycle Policeman Richard J. Meyer.

Mr. and Mrs. James Howard, both 29, of 1011 Congress street southeast, were treated for lacerations at Providence Hospital after their auto left Route 224 between Accokeek, Md., and Bryants road.

Six colored persons, including a 2-month-old child, received injuries when their automobile rammed an abutment on Route 28, just west of Rockville, Md.

Injured besides the child were LeRoy Sewell, Virgie Bruner, Daze Claggett, Charles Johnson and Donald Sewell, all of Gaithersburg. Virgie Bruner was removed to Montgomery County Hospital.

Two injured persons were taken to Casualty Hospital by the Branchville Rescue Squad early yesterday following an accident near the Dude Ranch on Baltimore boulevard.

Thomas Seay, 33, of 4945 Quebec street northwest, was treated for lacerations on the face and a possible broken ankle. Adele W. Cook, 30, of 1920 Sunderland place northwest, riding in the car with White, received lacerations and a cut above the right eye.

Treated at Providence Hospital were Vincent Thompson, 20, and George Thompson, 17, of Clinton, Md., hurt in an automobile accident at Silver Hill, Md. They were treated for minor injuries.

Herbert Burnett, colored, 40, of 310 H street northwest, was treated at Providence Hospital for lacerations received when an automobile in which he was riding ran into a ditch and overturned at Saratsville, Md.

Dorothy Alburger, 37, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Alburger, 63, of 3624 Tenth street northwest, were injured when their automobile collided with another at McLean, Va. Mrs. Alburger suffered fractures of both arms and head injuries, while her daughter was less seriously hurt.

In a collision at Goldsborough road and Massachusetts avenue extended, Frank Bunklee, 9, of 54 New York avenue northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture. Police said he was riding in an automobile operated by Charles Uhlman, a soldier stationed at Fort Washington, Md.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Oscar' Award Winners All Present in Featurette

Capra's 'Cavalcade' at Earle Next Week; New Streamliner to Launch River Season; This, That and the Other About the Theater

AN UNEXCELLED OPPORTUNITY to catch up on your movie-going will be afforded at the Earle Theater, come Friday, May 17. The 31-minute featurette, "Cavalcade of Academy Awards," spotlights every actor, actress and technician who has received an "Oscar" for outstanding performances from 1928 to 1939.

BELL

Produced under the personal supervision of Frank Capra, Academy president, it presents excerpts from the films honored during the 12 years of the Academy's existence. Winners of the gold statuettes, who will be seen for the first time in a single film, are: 1928, Janet Gaynor and Emil Jannings—and whatever has become of that Brooklyn-born German?—1929, Mary Pickford and Warner Baxter; 1930, Norma Shearer and George Arliss; 1931, Marie Dressler and Lionel Barymore; 1932, Helen Hayes and Fredric March; 1933, Katharine Hepburn and Charles Laughton; 1934, Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable; 1935, Bette Davis and Victor McLaglen; 1936, Luise Rainer and Paul Muni; 1937, Luise Rainer and Spencer Tracy; 1938, Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy and, 1939, Vivien Leigh and Robert Donat.

Half of "Cavalcade," a sort of world's fair of the cinema, is devoted to the annual awards banquet held this year to distribute the 1939 accolades. One of the most touching scenes is that in which Fay Bainter bestows an "Oscar" upon Hattie McDaniels, for her supporting work in "Gone With the Wind."

Hattie McDaniels, the first member of her race to be honored by the Academy, incidentally, will be seen on the stage of Abe Linchtman's Lincoln Theater for a week of personal appearances, beginning Friday, May 24. A feature of the screen entertainment on this occasion, appropriately enough, will be "Cavalcade of Academy Awards."

"Ship ahoy, Mates!" is the way Harry H. Baker, Washington manager of the Wilson Line, puts it. Prestidigitator Baker, whose sleight-of-hand operates in more directions than Hitler's army, pops off so that it may be widely known that the S. S. Mount Vernon, new super-streamliner, with a capacity of 2,400 passengers, will weigh anchor at 8:30 p. m., this Thursday evening, for its maiden glide down the placid Potomac. What Mr. Baker is pleased to call "this history-making cruise" will be under the sponsorship of the Junior Board of Commerce. An elaborate shipboard program has been blueprinted for the river season's launching.

Katharine Cornell ended her season and a transcontinental tour in her joint production with the Playwrights' Company of S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," at the Majestic Theater, Brooklyn, last Saturday night. In all, she played the Behrman comedy 446 consecutive times in 56 cities in 29 States, covering a distance of some 15,244 miles. The gross receipts added up to more than $1,000,000—about the amount by which some of us miss having a dime!

Communications Department

Comes a cordial and most kindly note from Cornelia Otis Skinner, which I am blushing too furiously to quote . . . Miss Skinner and Miss Cornell, old friends both, along with John Garfield, in the ill-starred "Heavenly Express," were among those I was prevented from enjoying this season, when I was a first-night absentee from the National for the first time in years while those "bugs" had me down on one knee for a nine count . . . Old Massa Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, postcarded from Hollywood last week that he would be in Washington by now . . . Wonder if he is? . . . And it is Otis Peabody Swift who makes it possible for me to note how completely Life and this column agree upon Robert E. Sherwood's "There Shall Be No Night," starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne . . . A few three-cent stamps and all will be personally answered—not later than 1950, according to past records!

The Cross Roads Theater, over yonder at Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., has joined the "new faces" hunt. Aspiring thespians are invited to show up at the Cross Roads on either Friday or Saturday night of this week, at 8 sharp, for tryouts. I am told that here is a chance for two or three—maybe more—hitherto unknown performers to get a toe-hold in the straw-hat branch of show business.

Lest-We-Forget Note

Seems to me there was something about a circus coming to town this week—so the chalk-striped Frank Braden, factotum of the R. B. B. & B. outfit, tells me!

Their Beautiful 'Bait' Snags the Swindlers

VERA ZORINA, PETER LORRE, ERICH VON STROHEIM
as the lovely lure and the two crooks, whose career of plundering goes slightly awry in the final scenes of "I Was an Adventuress," next screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater, opening Friday. Zorina, at the National last week in "Louisiana Purchase," has further opportunity here to display her charm as a ballet dancer

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 12.

SOCIAL NOTES: Molly Picon, now appearing in "Morning Star," related this story which Eleanor Roosevelt told at a dinner: Mrs. Roosevelt flew to Seattle, to see her grandchildren. She decided that one way of ascertaining how the children were progressing was to ask the youngsters who lived next door . . . Eleanor therefore went next door, met the children who play with Sistie and Buzzie and the new Boettiger child, and asked how they liked their neighbors . . . "They're swell," one youngster assured, "but they're awful liars. Do you know what they say? They say their grandfather is the President of the United States."

LABOR DEPARTMENT: Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, working on the committee for Polish relief, approached Sidney Hillman, head of the almagamated and vice president of the C. I. O. Mrs. Tibbett asked Hillman for the backing of the labor movement, in this charitable work . . . "I'm not the labor movement. I'm only the head of a union," said the C. I. O.'s vice president. "Go see Matthew Woll—vice president of the A. F. of L.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Dashiell Hammett saw Julie Haydon sitting with George Jean Nathan, who has been her constant escort. "You like Nathan?" asked Hammett. "And does he like you? Well, I'll tell you what kind of a man Nathan is. Even George Bernard Shaw had to like Ibsen—before Nathan liked Ibsen."

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT: Katherine Locke, of "The Fifth Column," is one of the pupils of Benno Schneider, the drama coach. Miss Locke read some of Juliet's lines, from "Romeo and Juliet," and Schneider shook his head, saying: "Too experienced" . . . "But I've never played Juliet," said Miss Locke . . . "Too experienced," the drama coach continued. "You've said those lines to someone else, before this."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett have a joint interest in a live poultry business, which they've just begun to operate. Miss Moore rushed from Fefe's Monte Carlo at 1 a. m. Thursday night, because she has to feed the chickens at dawn . . . "Where do you keep the chickens?" Miss Moore was asked . . . "At my place, in Connecticut," she informed. 'Because of the cold-weather spell, I've had no place to keep them—so now they're all over my house."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Vincent Youmans revealed this story. Some years ago he took a young lady to the Bossert Roof, in Brooklyn. While she went outside, to powder her nose, he thought of an idea for a song and, on the back of a menu, wrote the tune . . . He later included it in the score of "Smiles," but Marilyn Miller didn't like it—and so Youmans withdrew the song. The show closed, after a short run . . . A few copies of that song had been released, before the composer withdrew it to save it for another show. One of those copies went to England, where Ambrose, the bandleader, played it—resulting in orders for 5,000 that first day. That song, written in Brooklyn while a girl powered her nose, was reintroduced here as "the British song-hit." It was "Time On My Hands."

LOCAL NEWS: Henry Luce, who went to Europe last month, is in Amsterdam . . . Gaylord Hauser, who refers to Greta Garbo as "the girl friend," has written a new book called "Eat and Grow Beautiful." . . . Jerome Zerbe will work for the Italian Pavilion at the World's Fair . . . "Pittsburgh Phil," who startled his counsel by asking for a severance in the Murder, Inc., trials, and agreeing to talk, paid his lawyer $6,500 . . . Contrary to all published reports the ILGWU won't vote to return to the A. F. of L. at its forthcoming convention . . . Gertrude Niesen will become a brunette again, for the modern "Carmen" in which she'll star.

THEATER DEPARTMENT: Dorothy Gish went to a show this week, and when a friend phoned and asked where she had sat, she answered: "In row S" . . . "F" asked the friend . . . "No. 8." Dorothy repeated . . . "F—as in Fine?" the friend persisted . . . "No," replied Dorothy, "S—as is Stinks."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Jerome Goodman, a senior at DeWitt Clinton High School, just was fired from the senior prom committee, because he knew nothing about booking an orchestra for such an engagement . . . Jerome's education is being paid for by his older brother, Benny Goodman.

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: When the Nation tendered a dinner recently in honor of Eleanor Roosevelt, the committee wrote a letter to M.-G.-M., asking consent for the appearance of Melvyn Douglas, the screen star who has supported the Roosevelt Administration . . . "We'd love to permit Melvyn Douglas to attend the dinner, and hereby consent," was the M.-G.-M. reply. "Thank you so much for asking us, instead of Columbia Pictures—the company which employs him."

King-Smith Players Offer Biblical Drama

'Family Portrait' Is Play of Mary And Her Children

By Richard L. Coe.

"Family Portrait," Lenore Coffee's and William Joyce Cowen's strikingly simple play of the family of Jesus, is being presented for the first time in Washingtonby the King-Smith School of Theater Arts. The last in a series of five performances will be presented this evening at the King-Smith Playhouse in Rock Creek Park.

In their unusual telling of the familiar events, Mr. and Mrs. Cowen have emphasized the simplicity of the Nazarene setting. Their lines achieve exceptional force through continuous use of colloquialisms. Their central character is Mary; the Christ never appears in the play. Their leisurely story concerns His effect on Mary and her family, His brothers and their neighbors.

Before settings that further emphasize the stolid simplicity of the story, Keinert Wolff has directed his cast with sincere restraint. In the central role of Mary, Martha Nash, of the school's faculty, plays with admirable reverence and motion, at all times an exceptional figure, puzzled by her Son's power over others, resentful of His detractors and faithful to His memory after His crucifixion has brought disgrace upon their family.

Gladys Caswell, who assumed the role of Mary Cleophas Saturday evening, proved a resourceful player as the aunt whose passion for frankness overcame her allegiance to her quarreling nephews. Nancy Kenna, outstanding as Mary of Magdala, will be replaced this evening by Joyce Pretzfelder, who has been playing a woman of Jerusalem. Allen Andrews, Lamar Rowland, Jack Jacobs and Gunnar Jagdmann have leading made roles in the large cast of King-Smith students.

Trans-Lux

With nearly all of Europe in the throes of bitter and unprecedented war, the news pictorials at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week are vital records of history making events. In view of these events, the U. S. Navy is preparing as never before. Secretary Edison has his say in the plane versus ship controversy.

In the foreign news, the most picturesque shots are those of the French colonials being rallied in Syria, as well as the stately Sahara camel corps, and King Farouk's Egyptian army, all ready for battle, as allies of Britain and France. We also see the famous Anzacs sailing for secret duty, while Queen Elizabeth reviews Canadian troops. French troops are shown shoving off for Norway, and there are impressive pictures of the funeral rites to the late Capt. Losey, first American casualty of the war. Excellent pictures show the havoc wrought by the Cape Cod forest fires, while, in Brookln, Murder Inc., goes to trial. On the lighter side the traditional rancheros ride again in California; an Illinois farmer plows his land in circles and a new method is demonstrated to prevent baby mix-ups in hospitals. Lew Lehr takes on the monkeys at the N. Y. World's Fair and in sports there are the Yale-Columbia-Penn Blackwell and Puget Sound regattas. And best of all, the thrilling Kentucky Derby. The latest March of Time—"America's Youth-1940"—tells a big story that has great national interest. "Stranger Than Fiction" is followed by "Design For Happiness."

The cartoon is Donald Duck, as "The Riveter."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 12 (INS).—The Universal heads and stockholders in session at Atlantic City will hear that Bob Burns and Martha Raye are to be teamed in a Universal comedy, all of which means that Bob and Paramount didn't get together on the option and that the picture he is now making, "Comin' Round the Mountain," is his last at that studio. Martha, who opens in the Al Jolson show in New York, will come to Hollywood for her Universal assignment.

LOUELLA PARSONS

She just finished "The Boys From Syracuse" and I reckon has learned she better leave glamour to the other gals and concentrate on comedy. The combination of Bob and Martha should be profitable at the box office for their best pictures were made together at Paramount. Again, I wonder why Martha telephoned me, and tearfully denied trouble with Dave Rose, and then two days later divorced him.

Brian Aherne and Joan Fontaine flew in Saturday in their new private plane from New York because Columbia has paged the bridegroom for "Gribeuille," the French picture which B. B. Kahane will make. Charles Vidor will direct and Brian and young Mr. Vidor just feel they are lucky for one another after working together in "My Son, My Son." Though it isn't definite, it looks as if Rita Hayworth will be the femme lead. By the way, I don't know any player in Hollywood who gets more fan magazine publicity than Rita. Maybe it's because she's so obliging about posing in a bathing suit.

Twenty years ago, the name Mabel Taliaferro was well known to all theatergoers. Petite, attractive and a good actress, she was the toast of Broadway. Then she suddenly dropped out of sight until "The Man Who Came to Dinner" opened here with Alexander Woollcott. She was put into the role of the "tetched in the head" sister and did a swell job. It opened the doors of the studio for her and last week she was on the Warner lot testing for one of the leading character roles in "Episode," the Olivia De Havilland picture.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The shocking war news changed Eddie Mannix's plans and he will not fly to Europe; Michael Curtiz planes to New York for a holiday. The barn on his estate burned to the ground but his thoroughbred horses were saved through his efforts and those of Mrs. Curtiz (Bess Meredyth); the Spencer Tracys and Howard Strickland leave tomorrow for all the premieres of "Edison the Man."

Elsa Maxwell, who has been one of the greatest boosters of Raphael Hakim's "The Baker's Wife," hosted a party at the premiere. With her were Charles Chaplin, Marlene Dietrich, Tim Durant, Erich Remarque, Mrs. Darryl Zanuck, Gregory Ratoff and Countess Di Frasso; John Carrol and Ruth Hussey an interesting new twosome at the Florentine Gardens; William Haines host at a dinner honoring Constance Bennett, who has recovered from the flu; Helen Gilbert and Vic Orsatti dining by candlelight at the Tail o' the Cock and looking verra, verra romantic; Freddie March is back in town and on the Paramount lot.

Gail Melotte, one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood, will try for a movie career and That's all for today. See it shouldn't be difficult, you tomorroy!

Gayety

After one of the most successful seasons in its history, the Gayety Theater closes this week, offering a musical presentation that is fast and funny. It features a dazzling newcomer in the person of Miss Noel Carter. Miss Carter, making her initial appearance here, is a titian-haired beauty, remembered as a star Government witness in the recent Buckner-Phillippine bonds trial. Possessing a streamlined figure and a million-dollar smile, Noel is, indeed, a pleasant farewell gift from the management.

If you enjoy rough-and-ready slap-stick comedy, Binder and Rosen are two lads sure to fill the order. With the capable assistance of Pat Paige and Franklyn Hopkins, these funsters offer many witty comedy sketches. Al Pharr is another who adds much to the hilarious moments throughout the revue. One of the outstanding features of the attraction is the dancing of Marty Wayne and Judy Shaw.

The nice voice of Bobby Burns is heard to advantage in several of the colorful ballet numbers, while the "ladies of the ensemble" are both youthful and pretty. Curtain——

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 12.

When you get Sam Goldwyn and Ernst Lubitsch, who both strive for perfection in their pictures, wishing to heaven they had made "Our Town"—boy! You have got something. And Sol Lesser's got it. "Our Town," previewed last night, is the great American picture we've been waiting for. It's your town, my town, everybody's town—done so hauntingly that it will take the banker back to the country, make the country boy content to stay where he is. There's not a smidge of acting in it. Just as Sam Wood made Robert Donat and his boys live in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," so he does for the perfect cast in "Our Town."

HOPPER

Twentieth-Century has turned the desert on their lot, which was built for Tyrone Power in "Suez," into the Mississippi for "Brigham Young." Wouldn't our politicians and the populace of the Dust Bowl like to know how to do that?

And a letter from Mary Williams says, "We've all gone nuts on Nelson Eddy and decided someone should nominate him for an important job in the White House—not for President, because our Presidents age too fast. We can't do that to Eddy. Just make him secretary of harmony; then whenever there is strife, let him sing."

Oscar Levant is in town making happy faces sour. Which reminds me of a lecture Alex Woollcott did in a New Jersey town where Moss Hart was born. Moss asked to sit on the stage and listen He did, and when Alex finished, he said, "Sorry I havent time to answer questions. But if you'd like to be bored, this uninteresting looking gentleman sitting on the stage might answer a question for you." And with that, he walked off and never mentioned Moss's name.

John Shelton, Louis B. Mayer's protege, used to be Ed Price. Both RKO and Warner had him, gave him nothing to do. He went to New York, was discovered, is now making love to Lana Turner in "To Own the World," and will marry Ruth Hussey. Oh! boy!

Now that "Phantom Raiders" is finished, Walter Pidgeon and John Carroll are motoring to New Orleans—for a little fishing. That's what they say!

I hear Alice Faye is terrific as Lillian Russel, and Eddie Arnold, as Diamond Jim Brady, will laugh your blues away. They're betting me the picture is better than "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Well, I'll tell you after the preview.

What a price to play yourself. An independent company wanted Dixie Davis and red-haired Hope Dare for a week's work to play themselves in a film to be called "Murder, Incorporated," but thought $25,000 was a little high.

Philadelphia, May 12.

AND SO BIMELECH WON THE PREAKNESS—But for a few brief moments the 55,000 at Pimlico visioned the re-enactment of the Kentucky Derby finish. Again charging at the front-running Bimelech was Gallahadion. At the turn into the stretch Gallahadion was lapped on the Bradley colt. Once more Bimey was about to be looked in the eye by his Derby conqueror. But this time the beauty from the bluegrass didn't falter.

POVICH

We have it straight from Jockey Freddie Smith, who wouldn't lie, that Bimelech welcomed the challenge. "This is my kind of track, Gallie, old boy," said Bimey. "You had your kind of track at Louisville last Saturday. Sorry, old man, but I'm leaving you, and winning this Preakness."

In the Preakness, Bimelech finally deserved the accolades they showered on him prematurely at Louisville. They never did catch him. Andy K., Gallahadion and finally Mioland took a shot at him at different points in the running but Bimey shook them off like a Gay Nineties dandy would flick a stray bit of lint off his lapel. Bimey set the pace and revelled in it. It was Bimey by three at the finish, and it wasn't even a whipping finish.

His triumph won't make much difference to Bimelech which, win or lose, would have enjoyed the same good menu in the Bradley barn, but it made a tremendous difference to the semi-Cuban lad who was on his back in the Preakness. Little Freddie Smith recouped his riding reputation at Pimlico. He was regarded suspiciously when the odds-on Bimelech was licked in the Derby. But on Saturday he boldly took Bimelech into an early lead again and rode a clever, confident race. Bimelech was running for Col. Bradley, but Freddie Smith was riding for Freddie Smith.

AND SO JENKINS BEAT AMBERS—The fastest-punching lightweight since Joe Gans is the new champion of the world. Lightning in boxing gloves first stunned Lou Ambers, then knocked him out. Honest, young Lew Jenkins was something to see in the Garden the other night. Sensational is an overworked word, but he was that.

The happiest guy in the Garden that night was not Jenkins but Promoter Mike Jacobs. Into his lap was dropped the answer to a promoter's prayer. Jenkins is it. Jacobs saw in Jenkins a lad who is sure-fire to needle some interest into the sickly fight business, and he has strings on Jenkins.

Long before Referee Bill Kavanaugh led the beaten Ambers to his corner, Jacobs was rubbing his hands in anticipation of the gates the lusty-socking Jenkins will fetch him. A Jenkins-Henry Armstrong fight will pack any arena that gets it. It will be rapier vs. buzz saw and the pres agent who couldn't drum it into the biggest light-division gate in 15 years should quit in shame.

How about this Jenkins? Well, the punching power he displayed in eight previous bouts in New York was no myth. He doesn't trifle. No crouch, no fancy stepping. He's a stand-up fighter who sharpshoots with the kind of punch that could stop Ambers for the first time in his career. A split second after he barely missed with a long straight right, he knocked Ambers down with a long left hook.

Jenkins was no more awed by Ambers than he would have been by a sparring partner. He didn't pause to feel the champion out. There was no sparring. He simply walked into Ambers, tagged him with a right hand and watched him fall. Can Jenkins take it? Ay, there may be the rub. We don't know, because Ambers hasn't hit him yet.

AND SO THE YANKEES LOSE EIGHT IN A ROW—Hey, this is getting serious. The guy who would have predicted it last October after the Yanks slapped down the Reds in four straight games would have straightway been marched to the ward for violent cases. But who's looney now?

The season is in its fourth week and the Yankees are already eight and a half games behind the flying Red Sox. From here in, the Yankees will have to be a super ball team to win the pennant. Anything less won't do. Manager Joe McCarthy, who for four years has been writing out Yankee batting orders and relaxing in perfect security, is now on his mettle.

What's wrong with the Yankees? That's easy. Everything about 'em is bad at this writing. They can't hit left and right-handed pitching, for one thing. Their own hurling staff is badly disorganized, and the seamy side is beginning to show in "the greatest infield in the league." Second Baseman Joe Gordon is panicky on defense and the other day Frankie Crosetti made two errors in one inning—the tenth—and lost a ball game.

Who do you think the worst-hitting club in the league is at this time? The Yankees. The Yanks, who used to average two home runs a game, can show only a dozen for their first 21 games of the season. The only regular on the club who is hitting as much as .300 is Joe DiMaggio, and he has been in only four games. Bill Dickey is hitting .150, and Frankie Crosetti isn't hitting that much.

When DiMaggio and Dickey and Keller and Rolfe are hitting the ball, the Yankees can carry such anemic-swatting chaps as Crosetti and Babe Dahlgren, but when the Yankee big shots aren't hammering the ball the weaklings are an awful load to carry.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 12.—Jack Doyle, the wizard of odds, has the same unswerving loyalty for the bruised and battered New York Yankees that the horse players had for Bimelech before the Bradley colt won the Preakness Saturday.

CONSIDINE

Bimelech was beaten in the Derby and had no excuses, yet against an even stronger field he went to the Preakness post a 9-to-10 favorite after opening at 2-to-5. His Derby conqueror, Gallahadion, was so little thought of that—if he had won—he would have paid $15.40 for $2. And even at that, Gallahadion paid $4 for show.

Standing in the shadows of a Yankee losing streak, which was broken today, Doyle announces that the Yanks are still his choice to win the pennant. Not only that but he makes the last place American League team an odds-on favorite to win. He quotes them at 4-to-5, which news, I should think, will keep his phone ringing like an alarm clock run amok.

Doyle's price on the Red Sox is now 2-to-1. Joe Cronin's team opened at 4½-to-1 in Doyle's book. Cleveland, which opened at 8-to-1 is now 4-to-1. Jack says not to worry about the others.

It may depress the citizens of Brooklyn to learn that Doyle likes the chances of the Cincinnati Reds to repeat much more than he did at the start of the season. He opened them at 11-to-5 and now they have backed the price down to 6-to-5. However, Doyle thinks the Dodgers will outlast the Cards, who were co-favorites with the Reds in Doyle's first list. Jack now makes the Dodgers 2½-to-1 shots (they were originally 5-to-1) and he has moved back the Cards to third choice at 3-to-1.

That was a nice win of Bimelech's in the Preakness. It must have been a touching one, too, what with Mrs. Charles Shelden, who was Col. Bradley's guest at the gallop, weeping openly as Bim pounded across the finish line. And what with the old colonel—fresh up from his sick bed—breaking his iron reserve enough to poke a knuckle in his eye and grind it a little.

Perhaps Bimelech's loss in the Derby was just one of those things. It could have been an off day. On the other hand, it may be that he can't run a mile and a quarter. He was all out Saturday at the finish, but then so were the others. We'll find out more about his staying qualities in the mile and a half Belmont.

For the time being, however, Bimelech is the 3-year-old of 1940, a comparatively unusual honor for a colt who was also the undisputed best of the 2-year-olds last year. He has started four races as a 3-year-old, won three of them handily and finished second in the other and beaten all his reputable challengers. The one loss, of course, was the Derby—a setback which burned up untold thousands of dollars of his supporters' dough, an done which will always tinge his rep, no matter what great things he does from now on.

The Preakness turned out to be one of those rough and tumble things we usually associate with the Derby Day, a race which usually brings out the season's roughest riding. The Preakness field was encumbered by the unpredictable and rudderless Andy K., who pushed Bimelech up against Pictor at the start and nearly broke Bim's stride. He was bumped around going into the stretch, too, in the frantic efforts of Balaski on Mioland and Bierman on Gallahadion to get inside of Andy K and thus keep from being pushed up into the grandstand by Andy K's swerve.

A fight we'd walk a mile to see would be Henry Armstrong vs. Lew Jenkins, but it appears that we'll only have to do this if the subway breaks down. The welterweight champion is going to fight the new lightweight champion in July at one of the ball yards. The match will bring together the hardest and the most consistent punchers the lighter divisions have had in many years.

The New York State Athletic Commission prohibits a champion from challenging outside of his ranks, but Mike Jacobs will get around that one by matching them at 137 pounds, with neither title at stake. Even so, it should draw more dough than any title fight held between little men since the golden era.

Red Ruffing Halts Champions' String Of Losses at Eight, Allowing Six Hits

By the Associated Press

New York, May 12.—The world champion New York Yankees got back in the groove today, after loosing eight straight games, and shut out the Boston Red Sox on the six hit hurling of Big Red Ruffing.

Operating with perfect support, Ruffing easily earned his second victory against two defeats, striking out eight, walking only two and never letting a Boston runner get past second base. He even made two hits and a run himself in the 4-to-0 victory.

It was the first loss in seven games for the American League leaders and their first shutout this season, but the shaken-up Yankee line-up never gave them a chance. Twice double plays wiped out threats.

Cronin Makes Error

The game was won in the third inning when an error by Joe Cronin and singles by Bill Knickerbocker, Red Rolfe and Joe Dimaggio accounted for two runs.

In the seventh inning Ruffing doubled and loped home on a two-bagger by Tom Henrich. In the eighth Joe Gordon doubled, Ruffing beat out a hit to Cronin and Doc Cramer dropped Knickerbocker's fly to let Gordon score.

The victory, charged against Fritz Ostermueller, snapped a long streak of ill luck against left-handed pitching for the champions. Every man in the New York line-up except Buddy Rosar and Babe Dahlgren hit safely at least once as Yanks accumulated nine hits.

Joe DiMaggio, after singling home a run in the third, was passed purposely his next two times at bat, but each time Rosar, who followed, ended the inning.

Hartnett Still Has Confidence In Dizzy Dean

Chicago, May 12 (U.P.)—Manager Gabby Hartnett said tonight that the Chicago Cubs would not drop Dizzy Dean to a relief role despite the larruping the Pittsburgh Pirates gave the big "comeback" pitcher today.

DIZZY DEAN

"Whenever I think Dizzy is ready to pitch, I'll start him," Hartnett said. His statement spiked rumors current a week ago that Diz would be demoted from starters' ranks because of his failure to finish games.

The Pirates, National League tail-enders, scored three runs off Dean in the first inning today and he put two more runs on bases before he left with one out in the second. The Cubs eventually overcame the five-run disadvantage and won, 7-5.

Wally Moses, Athletics' outfielder, found himself cut off at plate by Rick Ferrell, Nats' catcher, when he attempted to score from first base on McCoy's double to right field in fifth inning of game at Philadelphia yesterday. Despite this setback, the A's held their lead and won, 4-2

Browns Beat Indians, 5 to 3; Auker Winner

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 12.—Elden Auker, right-handed submarine pitcher, jinxed the Cleveland Indians again today and gave the St. Louis Browns a 5-to-2 victory.

Apker went the route for the Browns, allowing nine hits, walking only two men, and collecting 3 of St. Louis' 12 safe blows.

The contest was tied at 2-all going into the eighth, when Rip Radcliff tripled and scored on George McQuinn's outfield fly. The Browns sewed it up in the ninth with two runs on singles by Chet Laabs, Don Heffner and Auker, and John Berardino's sacrifice.

After yielding two runs in the second inning, Willis Hudlin retired from the mound for the Indians in favor of Mel Harder, making his second relief appearance of the season.

Cincinnati Swamps Cards Twice, 7-1, 13-4

By International News Service

St. Louis, Mo., May 12.—The Cincinnati Reds strengthened their hold on first place in the National League race today, copping both ends of a double-header, 7-1 and 13-4, to sweep a three-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Paul Derringer notched his third victory of the season in the opener. He gave up only four hits. Jim Turner went the distance in the nightcap for his first win of the year, despite the fact that the Cardinals outhit the Reds, 16 to 11.

The Reds staged two big innings in each game to clinch their victories. Ival Goodman homered in the first inning of the opener, and after picking up anothher tally in the third, the Reds pushed over four in the fifth to clinch the victory. Frank McCormick's double drove in two runs and sent Bill McGee to the showers.

In the nightcap, the Reds punched out three home runs to aid in the rout of the Cardinals. However, seven of the runs in the second game were unearned, as the Cardinals committed four costly errors behind Lon Warneke. Frank McCormick homered in the first inning with a man on base, while Linus Frey hit for the cricuit in the third with the sacks empty. In the fifth,

Dodgers End Slump, Beat Phillies, 5 to 3

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 12.—The Dodgers pulled out of a two-game slump today to beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 5 to 3.

Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, the combination coach-pitcher, got credit for today's triumph, his second.

Chuck Klein hit his second home run in two days in the second inning to send the Phils away in front, but Fitz' knuckleball stymied the Phils thereafter until the eighth when they pushed across an unearned run. In the ninth the veteran grew wild, letting in a run and loading the bases with two out, but Tot Pressnell came in and snuffed out the threat.

Babich Wins 4th as Chase Is Pounded

Six of Macks' Eight Hits Are 2-Baggers; Griffs Scoreless Until 8th Inning

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 12.—The Nats played a ball game here today, but they didn't exactly disturb the peace of the Sabbath. They didn't score a run until the eighth inning and were operating with only two hits to that point. It was that sort of peace and quietude on the part of the Nats which enabled the Athletics to win the ball game, 4 to 2.

Big Johnny Babich outpitched Ken Chase to fetch the A's the victory. At least, the records show that Babich held the Nats to six hits, while the A's were collecting ten. The Athletics' blows had the most authority. By the end of the sixth inning, they had eight hits, six of them doubles.

Whenever the A's needed a run, they simply slapped one of Chase's pitchers for a two-bagger. That's how they collected all four of their tallies. The formula was something like this: A pitch by Chase, a two-bagger by the hitter and presto! a Philadelphia run. Rookie Al Rubeling collected a pair of the destructive doubles.

Babich Wins Fourth

Today Babich scored his fourth pitching triumph of the season. But the large righthander who was discarded by the Dodgers a couple of seasons ago and drafted last winter by the A's from the Yankees' Kansas City farm, was exceedingly fortunate to get away with his victory today. If he didn't shake the hand of every one of his infielders after the game, he's an ingrate.

No pitcher ever was backed up by more scintillating support than Shortstop Bill Lillard, Second Baseman Benny McCoy and Third Baseman Al Rubeling gave Babich today. They caught line drives that spun 'em around. They scooped up fierce ground smashes and turned 'em into double plays, and generally heaped grief on the Nats to rescue Babich from trouble.

With that sort of support Babich had a comparatively easy time of it. George Case greeted him with a two-bagger on the first pitch of the game, but for the next six innings the only hit he gave up was Zeke Bonura's single in the fourth.

West Gets Walk

There were signs that the Nats might tie the score in the eighth and also the ninth. Pinch-Hitter Sammy West drew a walk to open the eighth and even after Pinch-Hitter Jake Early grounded into a double play, the Nats threatened. Jimmy Wasdell batted for Chase and lined a two-bagger off the right-field wall. George Case drew a walk and Lewis breathed life into the rally with a single to right that moved Wasdell home with the Nats' first run.

The issue was up to Gerald Walker at this point, and he must be given an "a" for effort. He smashed a line drive toward second base and everybody was running—until Benny McCoy speared the ball with a diving catch.

Cecil Travis tripled off the right-field wall with none out in the ninth and Jimmy Bloodworth's bid for a home run fell short when a stiff breeze blew the ball into the glove of Bob Johnson, who was standing against the leftfield wall. Gelbert delivered a single to left that scored Travis, but Al Evans obliged Babich and the 12,209 customers by striking out, but lustily.

The A's commenced the two-bagger rat-a-tat in the second inning. With two out Hayes doubled off the leftfield wall and Chapman scored him with a double down the leftfield line. The game rocked along at 1-0 until the fifth, when Rubeling led off with a double to right. Lillard scored him with a single to center. McCoy banged a two-bagger to right later in the inning, but Bloodworth's relay to the plate cut off a run.

It was 4-0 by the end of the sixth. Chase walked Siebert, and the two-baggers recommenced. Chapman hit one to center and Rubeling hit one to right and the A's had two more runs and, as it proved, the ball game.

Brescia-Lazer Bout Tonight Opens Busy Fistic Week

Heavyweight Duel Prelude to Two Title Fusses in Vicinity

What is probably the busiest week in boxing since the sport was legalized in the District gets underway tonight at Riverside Stadium when Jorge Brescia meets Roy Lazer in a 10-round prelude to two world's featherweight championship fights—one here Wednesday night at Griffith Stadium and the other in Baltimore a week from tonight.

Tonight's engagement at Riverside trots out a couple of grade B heavyweight material—and that's giving both the benefit of the doubt.

Wednesday night's encounter brings out Petey Scalzo, newly knighted by the National Boxing Association in a ceremony that supposedly leaves him featherweight champion of the world, against Frankie Covelli, of Chicago, in a 15-round battle for the 126-pound crown.

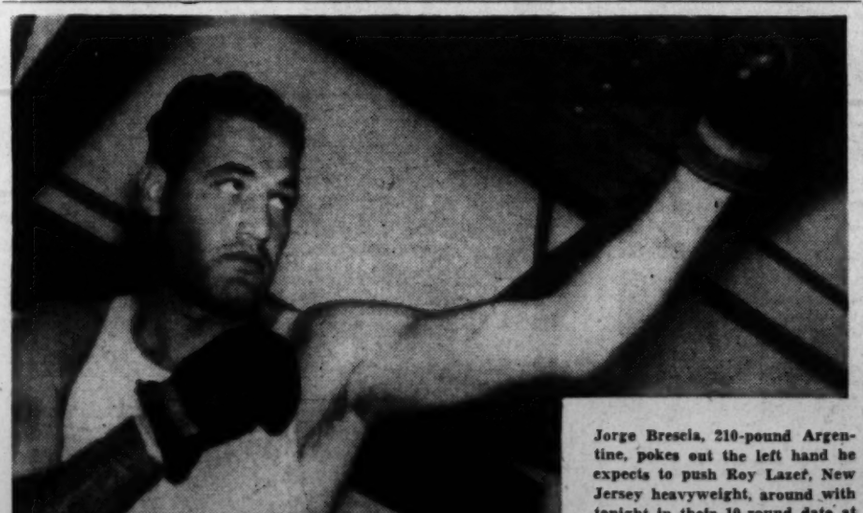
Joey Goes to Bat

Baltimore's version of the Griffith Stadium affairs features Joey Archibald, from whom the N. B. A. took the 126-pound crown, against Harry Jeffra, public hero No. 1, in Baltimore, in a 10-round battle the night of May 20.

But to get back to tonight's encounter at Riverside, Roy Lazer, the unknown, arrived in our town yesterday and greatly to the surprise of one and all was able to stand up without assistance.

Reports had it that Roy had spavined hocks, fallen arches and, furthermore, had been barred from New York because of faulty vision. From a look at Lazer yesterday, none of this seems true on the surface, but tonight's battle will tell the tale.

Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin thinks most highly of Buddy and called in no less an authority than Natie Brown yesterday to bear out his contention that Lazer will knock Brescia flat tonight. Furthermore, Erwin quotes Marty Gallagher as saying "Lazer has a very good chance of winning."



Jorge Brescia, 210-pound Argentine, pokes out the left hand he expects to push Roy Lazer, New Jersey heavyweight, around with tonight in their 10-round date at Riverside Stadium. Brescia, who knocked out Maynard Daniels here this winter, will be a prohibitive favorite over Lazer.

"I knw I'm new in here, but I got a big thrill when I saw my stablemate, Lew Jenkins, take the lightweight crown from Lou Ambers last week, and I told Lew and Hymie Caplin that I'd put the chill on Brescia, or know the reason why," Lazed said yesterday.

Roy added that he didn't want to make "any extravagnt claims, but I honestly think I'm going to be a really great fighter from now on."

Brescia will be the favorite tonight, and the odds are unmentionable. The South American, who weighs a hefty 210 pounds, always puts up a crowd-pleasing fight, and scored a big hit here recently in a knockout victory over Maynard Daniels. The main question is whether Lazer can stand up long enough to give Jorge a chance to make a good fight of it.

Erwin's experience with the recent Nathan Mann-Buck Everett "incident" leads one to believe that maybe Lazer will pull a surprise, but nothing's certain in the fight business until it's all over.

Upset Is Possible

The supporting card tonight presents enough strength to lend enchantment—mainly the professional debut of Gilbert Mayo, hard-hitting Alexandria featherweight. Mayo faces Baby Escobar in a four-rounder.

Maynard Daniels and Teddy Martin, New Yorker, fight the eight-round semifinal, and Sammy Magro faces Baltimores Vic Finnazzo in another eight. The four-round opener at 8:30 p. m. brings out Floye Grayson and Harry Richardson, colored middleweights.

Keele-Vaile Upset Hollebaugh and Molloy At Beaver Dam; Houghton-White Are Beaten; Capital Club Team Wins Over Catoctin

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Jack Keele, a long but wild-hitting youngster, and Charles Vaile, his more consistent partner, turned in the biggest upset of the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball championships to date by defeating Russ Hollebaugh and George Molloy, 1 up on the nineteenth hole yesterday at Beaver Dam. The winners represent Kenwood No. 1, while the losers are the Capital No. 2 team.

Keele started with a birdie and Vaile came through with lots of help to hold Hollebaugh, Hermitage Invitation champion, and Molloy, former Capital Club titleholder, even at the ninth. The Capital team went one up on the seventeenth, but the Kenwood duo won the eighteenth when their opponents three-putted and Keele repeated with a winning birdie four on the nineteenth hole.

Capital's No. 1 team also was a 19-hole victim in the second upset of the day, Billy Houghton and Frank White losing a 2-up lead with two to play by three-putting the last two greens, and Al London and M. Caplan, of the Woodholme Club in Baltimore, won in extra holes. Indian Spring's No. 2 line-up of Lou Harrison and Jock Olmsted lost, 2 and 1, to Eddie Johnston and Stuart Windsor, Terra Mariae, after trailing all the way.

Roger Peacock's one-under-par 71 was the best individual score of the second round matches as he defeated John MacKenzie and Bobby Jones, of Hollendale, 4 and 5, without the help of his partner, Claude Rippy.

Defending Champions Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, of Rolling Road, and a best ball 72 in defeating Bonnie View No. 1, 5 and 4, while Baltimore C. C. won, 4 and 3, over Suburban, with Bill Eager's eagle three on the twelfth a feature.

Otto Greiner was only one over par as he and Dr. Ed Stinebert won, 6 and 5, over Ralph Gibson and Mel Shipley, Manor. Congressional's top team of Ralph Bogart and Charley Malone defeated the last host club hope, Jim Gipe and Joe Balestri, 1 up, after leading 2 up and 3 to play. The losers were 1 up, at the turn but Bogart birdied 10 and 11 to take the lead, and Gipe and Balestri each birdied the twelfth to square the match again. Malone helped Bogart's 74 by two shots for a best ball 72. Baltimore has five teams remaining in the quarter-finals, out of eight.

Terra Mariae No. 2 (Edward Johnston and Stuart Windsor) defeated Indian Spring No. 2 (Jock Olmsted and Lou Harrison), 2 and 1.

Rolling Road No. 1 (Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes) defeated Bonnie View No. 1 (Spencer Reed and L. Passano), 5 and 4.

Woodholme No. 1 (Al Landon and M. Caplain) defeated Capital No. 1 (Billy Houghton and Frank White), 1 up, 19 holes.

Congressional No. 1 (Ralph Bogart and Charles Malone) defeated Beaver Dam No. 1 (Jime Gipe and Joe Balestri), 1 up.

Terra Mariae No. 1 (Otto Greiner and Dr. Stinebert) defeated Manor No. 1 (Ralph Gibson and Mel Shipley), 6 and 5.

Baltimore C. C. No. 1 (William Eager and Donald McPhail) defeated Suburban No. 1 (Nathan Kaufman, jr., and David Halle), 4 and 3.

Kenwood No. 1 (Jack Keele and Charles L. Vaile) defeated Capital No. 2 (Russ Hollebaugh and George Molloy), 1 up, 19 holes.

BRADLEY HILLS

A best-ball 63 by Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, and Al Jamison, of the host Bradley Hills Club, was good for a 5 and 4 victory over Leo Walper, unattached, and Mel Shorey, Indian Spring, in an informal exhibition match.

Cox and Walper tied for low score with one over par 69's but Jamison helped Cox's score by six shots with several birdies to close out the Walper-Shorey duo on the fourteenth hole. The losers won three of the last four holes but it was too late. Shorey scored 71 and Jamison, with fives on two par three holes, a 73.

Cox was out in 34 as his team led, 3 up at the turn and Jamison started back with birdies on the tenth and eleventh to increase the margin.

Cox and Walper halved the thirteenth hole in birdie twos, both dropping putts from one side of the green to the other. Walper and Shorey were back in par 34's, and out in 35 and 37, respectively. The losers had a best ball 66.

CAPITAL

Capital Club golfers, minus the first four players on the team who were competing in the four-ball play at Beaver Dam, nearly doubled the score on the visiting Catoctin Club team of Frederick winning, 23½ to 12½.

Visiting Pro Robert Grove and his partner, M. Rhoderick, won only a half point from Capital's first duo of Bill Pendergast and George Borsari. Leo Colliflower, former Catoctin pro, played in the second bracket and with Car Snook won 2 points out of 3 over Ken Spence and Allen Laing.

William Pendergast and George Borsari (Capital) scored 2½ points to ½ for Robert Grove and M. Rhoderick (Catoctin).

Ted Meares and Bob Raiford (Capital) scored 1 point to 2 for E. Rhoderick and Dr. W. E. Ross (Catoctin).

John Phelan and S. S. Fletcher (Capital) scored ½ point to 2½ for R. Harrington and R. Taylor (Catoctin).

E. R. Ferguson, jr., and W. J. Sanford (Capital) scored 1 point to 2 for E. Haller and M. Derr (Catoctin).

Dizzy Dean Is Routed But Cubs Beat Bucs, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 12.—Dizzy Dean was knocked out of the box in the second inning today, but the Chicago Cubs went on to win a 7-to-5 victory over Pittsburgh on Bill Herman's three-run homer in the eighth frame.

Dean barely survived the opening inning. Lee Handley drew a pass and was forced by Paul Waner. Then Arky Vaughan tripled and Elbie Fletcher followed with a home run.

After Virgin Davis grounded out in the second, Frank Gustine singled and Pitcher Truett Sewell walked. At this point, Dean went to the showers and Claude took the mound.

In the eighth, Al Todd and Pinch-hitter Gabby Hartnett sandwiched singles around a base on ball, to account for one run, setting the stage for Herman's game-winning blow.

The game marked the fourth time Dean has been kayoed in five starts. He was reluctant to leave the game when Manager Hartnett waved Olsen in from the bullpen. The big right-handed went to the dressing room shortly afterward, donned his street clothes and left the park.

The Cubs knocked Sewell out of the box in the fourth inning, but could do little with Dick Lanhan's offerings until the eighth inning splurge.

Cheltenham Boys Win

The Cheltenham School for Boys baseball team defeated the Cheltenham A. C., 12 to 10, yesterday with the aid of four home runs, two by Bradshaw. Other home-run hitters for the winners were Solomon and Matthews. The winning pitcher was Payne.

Dick Williams Beats Gottlieb In Net Tourney

Dick Williams, second seeded player from Episcopal High School, yesterday earned the right to meet Bobby Bensinger, of Takoma Academy for the championship of the Invitation Interscholastic Tennis Tournament by defeating Third Seeded Eli Gottlieb, of Roosevelt, in the semifinals. The scores were 7—5, 4—6, 8—6.

It wa sa sensational match replete with long rallies and miraculous saves. Williams twice came from behind to tie up the count and finally win out, as he scored a placement on what had appeared an unreturnable shot. Gottlieb held leads of 5—3, 30—0, and 6—5, 40—30, in the second set.

Williams and Bensinger, the national indoor champion, will meet for the crown at 3:15 today, with Bensinger the favorite. Concurrently the boys' championship of the tournament will be decided in a match between Cotton Smith, of Friends, and Sam Boyle, of St. Albans. Doyle is seeded one and Smith two.

Second Round

Lion defeated Brush, 3 and 2; Wright defeated Snow, 1 up, 19 holes.

Diffenbaugh and Barnett, one of the top pro teams in this sector, held a lead of two up and three to play, but Allan came through with a spectacular finish, two 30-foot birdie putts on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes, to square the match and they halved the eighteenth in pars.

The gallery of more than 500 watched Barnett square the match on the ninth hole with a putt the length of the green for a birdie. The District pros went two up within three holes with Diffenbaugh's birdie a feature. Danny cut the margin to one on the fourteenth, but they went two up again on the fifteenth before Allan's finish squared the match.

Diffenbaugh's 73 was the best score over the tricky par 70 layout, while Allan Burton was a stroke back with 74, and his brother Dan and Barnettt tied with 75s each.

The match was a meeting of teacher and pupils, as both Danny and Allan broke into the golf game in Barnett's golf shop at Chevy Chase.

Dutra Wins Open

Fresno, Calif., May 12 (INS).—Olin Dutra, the former National Open champion from Los Angeles, traversed 54 holes of a tricky course in 211 to win the State open golf championship today. The big Basque had an eagle 3 and birdie 3 on the fifteenth and sixteenth holes of his final round to beat out Northern California Open Champion Mark Fry by three strokes.

Walker's Metope Wins Columbus Show Title

Wins ni Junior Division, and Then Captures Grand Championship; U. S. Randle's String Of Hunters and Jumpers Win Most Events

By Anne Hagner

George Walker's Metope, a mild-mannered brown mare ridden by Elaine McDowell, took home two championship ribbons from the Columbus Horse and Pony Show, which was held yesterday at Marrian Curran's Indian Spring farm, near Silver Spring, Md.

Metope first triumphed in the junior division and came back later to defeat Representative Lansdale Sasscer's Virginia Lee, from Upper Marlboro, Md., for the grand championship. Miss McDowell took the mount on Metope because Walker is still unable to ride as a result of the spill he took with the mare in the Potomac Hunt's races last month.

Although the championships fell into other hands, U. S. Randle's string of hunters and jumpers were the biggest winners of the day, as the stable's united efforts netted a total of 13 ribbons. With young Frank (Happy) Christmas doing most of the riding, Randle's horses took three blue ribbons, two of them going to Randle's Way, high-minded chestnut gelding who was victorious in the touch-and-out and the junior jumping events and placed second in the triple bar event.

Best Time Gets Reserve

Reserve to Metope in the junior classes was Donald Bradley's good-looking chestnut filly, Best Time, who also defeated a nice field in the added anothre in the third when cpithing of Ted Lyons, the White bridle path hacks event with Mrs. Bradley up.

Among the ponies, David Belding's consistent Star Boy, many times a champion in the past, added another to his credit by winning the tricolor with little Bucky Magill up. Reserve went to C. Oliver Iselin, jr.'s striking chestnut, Peach Melba, from Middleburg, Va.

Another Virginia entrant, Herman Piggott's Brazil, journeyed to Indian Spring from Saturday's Arlington Hall show and took the triple bar class, where performances were surprisingly mediocre. Randle's Way took the red ribbon in the event, placing over Roland Hartman's Dixie and A. R. Heinrich's Good Friday, ridden by Eddie Talbert.

Lurline Captures Event

In the hunter hacks class, Katherine Smyser rode her own mare, Lurline, to score over Randle's Find, Metope and Marrian Curran's Tahra, which finished in that order.

Metope turned in a beautiful round to take the handicap event over Brazil and Virginia Lee, and also won the blue in the working hunters class, in which entrants were sent over the outside course.

Jackie Warren, Woodrow Wilson High School student who recently won the championship of the University of Maryland's show, rode her Fair Lawn to a clean performance in the open jumping, but in a jump-off with Randle's Shadow and Virginia Lee fell from the little mare and automatically received third place. Fortunately, Miss Warren received only a slight arm injury.

Chisox Nose Tigers, 4 to 3, Behind Lyons

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 12.—Behind the pitching of Ted Lyons, the White Sox Sabbath pitcher, Chicago scored enough runs in the first three innings today to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 4 to 3, before 18,317 fans.

With a barrage of singles off the bats of Bob Kennedy, Taft Wright and Luke Appling, doubles by Mike Kreevich and Eric McNair, not to mention an error by Tigerman Earl Averill, the Sox scored three in the first stanza, sending ancient Line Drive Nelson to the showers. He was replaced by Trout. The Sox added another in the third when Kreevich tripled and scored on Wright's single.

Charles Town Opens Today With Finn Relief Purse Feature

Nine Horses Entered for Sprint Battle

Evening Light Held Likely Choice; Card Has 7 Other Races; Post Time 2:30 P. M.

By Walter Haight

Charles Town opens today. With the hustle and bustle of the 1940 Preakness now history, racing fans in this section will turn to the cozy establishment of President A. J. Boyle and his associates, located in thatp anhandle of West Virginia that panhandle of West Virginia tomac River at Harpers Ferry.

For 48 racing days, Charles Town will offer its version of the sport of kings. There is not a Kentucky Derby, a Preakness or a Santa Anita Handicap in the condition book but, as usual, there will be action. Photo finishes, short shots, long shots and all the thrills and chills, dear to the heart of the turf fan, will be there just as at Hialeah, Belmont or Pimlico. And the payoffs will be made in the same glorious greenbacks that constituted theb ulk of that $3.80 mutuel on Bimelech last Saturday.

Today's feature race will be the Finnish Relief Purse, $1,000 added. When the call was made for funds for the Finns, President Boyle stepped forward and announced that Charles Town's opening day even would go toward relief. The collections for the Finns might have bogged down in some sectors, but, true to his promise, the Charles Town Jockey Club is donating the net proceeds of the race, plus an outright gift of $1,000 to the worthy cause.

Nine Starters Named

The race, over the 6½-furlong course, is for 3-year-olds and upward and nine starters were named in the overnight entries. Evening Light, a sprinter of excellent quality, has been assigned topweight of 116 pounds and is the likely favorite. The daughter of Jack High, beaten on three lengths in a handicap at Pimlico, will have to be at her best to take the major money.

Royal Business, last year's "Queen of the smaller tracks," will return to action on an oval she loves and gets 2 pounds from the probable favorite. Bud's Light and Schley Goree, winners this year in Maryland, and Walter Light, beaten a nose in last at Pimlico, are sure to draw more than scattered backing.

Racing Secretary Fred Burton has arranged seven other events for today. So plentiful were entries that overflow fields were named in six cases. Sprinting will occupy attention up to the sixth race, when horses will go over long routes for the remainder of the card.

Horses Are Plentiful

Never has there been such a demand for stall space at Charles Town, and this is not a press agent's dream. President Boyle said yesterday that every stall within 20 miles of the track had been rented by the association, and officials were still trying to take care of requests. Needless to say, the barns on the grounds are jammed. Charles Town had a big, modern stable erected this spring to replace the one that went up in smoke last winter.

In addition, the track has drilled a large artesian well and installed a huge water tank. Fire plugs have been placed at strategic points. More important, perhaps, to customers is the fact that the well, sunk 500 feet to an underground stream, will supply drinking water at the track.

Post Time 2:30 P. M.

As usual at the spring-summer meeting, the post time for the first race will be 2:30 o'clock. The daily double will be conducted on the second and third races. Charles Town is the only track in the country that does not have the "double" on the first race. Officials there always have encouraged play on the twin bet which other tracks frown on. By having it begin on the second race, late arrivals are given a chance.

Russell F. Oakes, racing writer for 15 years and lately with the Racing Form, is one of the few new officials. He is executive assistant to President Boyle. Donald Hay, of Baltimore, is in charge of the mutuels.

Charles Town will use the new electric starting gate with the door stalls for the first time.

MINIATURE PINSCHER

Resembling the larger Doberman Pinscher decidedly, these little fellows have been bred in Germany for centuries. Little is known about the crosses or breeds from which they came or just when they came into being as a breed. They are natural show-offs, exceedingly intelligent and will bluff their way out of nearly any difficult situation. They may be nearly any color or combination as long as white isn't included, should be about 11 inches at the shoulder and weigh from 5 to 10 pounds. (Photo courtesy Dog World.)

Clayton Bishop Wins Outboard Marathon Race

By the Associated Press

New York, May 12.—A bitter following wind that whipped sprays of water into his craft from behind and kicked up dangerous white caps ahead failed to stop Clayton Bishop from winning his third Albany to New York outboard marathon on the Hudson River today.

His body bent in two like a reed in a gale, Bishop climbed out of his Class B boat, "Humarock Baby" after five hours, 30 minutes, and 18 seconds of constant buffeting over the 130-mile course.

His average of 23.659 miles per hour, slowest time in the 13 years of the race, was sufficient evidence of the punishment that the 39-year old Onset, Mass., fire chief took en route to his triumph. No other pilot has won the event more than once. Bishop took it for the first time in 1936 and again last year, both times with the same "Baby" that carried him across today. His time of 40.6 b. p. m. last year was a record for hulls of that class.

At Irvington, N. Y., 20 miles from the end of the grind, Bishop's boat was nearly swamped by the gallons of water it had picked up. A fisherman towed him to short, where he changed his plugs and bailed out. His advantage over the field of 100 at that stage was so overwhelming that he still managed to finish well ahead of Charles Foster, Peekskill, N. Y., driver who came in half an hour later in his class F boat, Caprice.

Charles Keough, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., pilot of a class B outboard, was third in 6 hours, 38 minutes and 26 seconds, with a speed average of 19.539 m. p. h.

The veteran Fred Jacoby, of North Bergen, N. J., who has started in every race since 1929 and was first in 1935, took fourth place after 6 hours, 50 minutes and 23 seconds, averaging 18.9 m. p. h. About one quarter of the original starters finished, with only 36 reaching Poughkeepsie, the half-way mark.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al,

Californians sing, "California here we come;" Virginians croon, "Carry me back to ole Virginny" and some people hum, "I want to go back to that shack in—." Well, we ain't exactly Alabama bound, but we are Charles Town bound. Yea, Bo! Today we return to the land of mountains, Pork Chops and Palumbo. Good time Pimlico, better time Charles Town. Whether you go on the B. & O. Special, drive up through Leesburg, steer through Frederick or hop a ride on the tail-gate of a milk truck, it's all the same. There are more horses up there than I dreamed about on the night before the Derby. Brother Boyle has the joint all cleaned and pressed. Brother Bradley is ready to climb in the stewards stand. It will look like old home week. But I can't hop from Pimlico to Charlesburg without passing along a couple of mutuel department stories I picked up last Saturday at the Preakness. An elderly lady got in line when the windows were opened for the first race. When she arrived at the seller, she demanded, "One $2 ticket on Bimelech." The clerk told her she was five races too early. The next race she moved up to the window again and asked for the Bimelech ticket and again she was informed that race wasn't up. She was persistent, however, and each time the windows opened she bounced right back in the same line and asked for a Bimelech ticket. Finally, the betting began on the Preakness. The clerk looked back in the line and the old lady was there. When she came up to the window, the clerk smiled, pressed the button and passed her the Bimelech ticket. She pushed the ticket back to him and said, "I don't want this, I've changed my mind. Give me one on Dit." Another clerk tells this one: The fifth race was just over when a man walked up to the $50 ticket window. He had on a baggy suit that looked as if he had slept in it, his shoes were muddy and he needed a shave. "Is this where you buy tickets on Bimelech?" he asked. The clerk looked him over and said to himself. "This fellow don't know he's at the $50 window. I'll kid him along." Then outloud he replied, "I'll be ready to sell just as soon as the machine is checked." The man remained at the window. When the machine was ready the mutuel clerk giggled to himself and wondered what this fellow would say when he discovered it was the $50 window and not the $5 one. "All right boss, what do you want to bet?" asked the clerk. "I want this much of Bimelech," replied the man, pushing a greasy $500 bill on the counter. Confucis say: $2 on Trout Stream. B. R. now $16.

First race—Marin is second on the also eligible list, and is a doubtful starter. However, this one has shown enough to warrant the top spot if sent postward. Kilplacer had oodles of speed in Maryland, but was overmatched. Should go well in this. Grand Waltz likes the track.

Second race—Amerlee turned in good races on the big tracks and if this one makes the turns it will be all over but the pay-off. Connamista is a fast one and will be right in there knocking. Red Idol seems best of the other eligibles. Aster Lady and Windsor Chief would be dangerous if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—Worthowning had two races at Bowie to put him on edge and appears the best suited of this field. Balkanese always has performed well over this oval. Nay Nay should get some of the purse.

Fourth race—There are few horses who can outrun Prince Turley in a short sprint when he is right. The veteran appears to be in good shape and I'm going to string along. Notoriety ran well at the big town and is the one to beat. Heel Dust for the minor award.

Fifth race—Royal Business will be back on the home grounds for the day's feature. Has shown enough to warrant a top pick in a good line-up. Evening Light has the class, and that recent Maryland race shows she is ready for the best. Bud's Light has early speed and could be a threat.

Sixth race—Allen Caid is reported to have worked fast and may take down the chief money in this company. I see no reason for mistakes. Schley Buck and Trout Stream are good now and will be in the thick of contention.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take America First, Last Scamp and Chief Evergreen.

Best bet—Extra Good.

Unique Golf Match Won by Babe Ruth And Jim Demaret

Norwalk, Conn., May 12 (INS).—In a unique golf match, Babe Ruth and Jimmy Demaret defeated Gene Tunney and Gene Sarazen, 2 and 1, today at the Strawhaven Country Club in Norwalk.

While the match was in progress, Fred Waring's Orchestra serenaded the foursome with swing music and the gallery, breaking all golfing traditions, talked and laughed as the players made their shots.

The boisterous crowd and swing music bothered Demaret, leading professional money winner so far this year, very little. He toured the hazardous terrain in par 72. Sarazen was second with 72, one over, and Tunney and Ruth both carded 82's.

Aces Take Victory

Tru-Blu Ten Beats Garvin; Juliano Stars

One-Hit Pitching Brings Beermen 7-3 Win in Loop Game

Tru-Blu ten continued its torrid streak in the Sunday Morning Sport Center Softball League yesterday as Pitcher Juliano held Garvin Grill to one hit fr a 7-2 triumph. Both the lsers' runs were scored in the final frame as Juliano eased up a bit.

Evening Star's victory string came to an abrupt halt in another league battle, Ida's Department issuing it a 5-0 shutout on the strength of another one-hit effort by Pitcher Dodson. Ryans Tavern also won its start as it rang up 14 safeties and an 8-4 edge over Philippine Center.

On Fishing

Each day now brings additional reports of nice catches of hardheads, and the tide seems to have little to do with the time they bite best. Frank J. Hurst, sr., fishing at Solomons on Wednesday caught 49 on the flood while in the Honga River across the bay the best going was on the ebb and slack.

ACKERMAN

Several small catches have been made off Holland Point Bar in Herring Bay, and we believe the going will be just as good here as anywhere on the bay. The Patuxent, from Broom's Island to Benedict, should provide the best fishing however, for the shallower waters are warming far quicker than the deeper bay waters.

Perch fishermen on the Potomac from Capt. Joe Fletcher's to Chain Bridge haven't had such good catches due to the great numbers of herring coming up to spawn, but what they lost, the snaggers gained, for the run, which started two weeks ago, has been heavy. The fishing should be better from now on. The Potomac is clearing in great shape, while the Patuxent is as clear as it ever gets at this time of the year.

Sea trout will probably be striking at Wachaprague and other fishing places along the Eastern Shore of Virginia before another week because commercial men off the Jersey coast have been taking the first run for more than ten days. Lower bay pounds have been lifting them for a still longer period.

The blues are not in at Oregon Inlet—those being brought back being taken by netters far offshore. The stripers inside are providing a reasonably fair substitute in the meantime.

Local anglers going down for the Florida West Coast tarpon fishing are having better going than for many years, yet the bright spotlight of big game fishing is now focused on Cat Cay, Bimini and Walker's Cay, just across the Gulf Stream in the British Bahamas, for the first giant bluefin tuna of the season was caught on Sunday by Capt. Walter Clay.

It weighed 465 pounds and took 47 minutes to land with a Tycoon rod and 54-thread. Howard Cramer boated a 160-pound Allison in ten minutes the same day and on the same heavy tackle, which everyone is using now that the tuna run is on.

Tuna at Cat Cay are traveling fish—lean, fast, and far tougher than they will be two months from now on the Nova Scotian coast. Just about impossible to land on the 16-24 tackle so much in vogue there last season.

A 264-pound blue marlin was taken aboard Capt. Bill Fagan's Florida Cracker on Sunday also, in 14 minutes. Small stuff after the 700-pounder caught at Walker's Cay some two weeks ago.

It was at the latter place the new world record mako shark was caught by Winston Guest. It weighed 810 pounds, topping the previous record holder by 12 pounds, and took an hour and five minutes on 54-thread line. There is some doubt this was a legal catch—four is not official as yet.

Talking about sharks—two boats in the commercial shark fishery at Salerno, Fla., brought in last week what is thought to be the greatest number ever caught in a single day The total was 152, 17 more than the best previous catch made about a year ago at the same place.

Flood Defeats Orange Disc Nine by 6 to 3

Burroughs' Hurling, Mottow's Home Run Responsible for Win

Notice that it will be one of the teams to beat in the National City "A" Baseball League was served by J. C. Flood's scrappy nine yesterday when it started late, but scored a decisive 6-to-3 victory over Orange Disc in its first league game. The clash on the Ellipse was one of seven in two sections of the popular Sunday circuit.

To Jack Burroughs, who was touched for ten safeties, went credit for the winning mound performance, though Lefty Lou Mostow's homer in the third, with two mates aboard, was equally as responsible. Henry Martin, Central High catcher, led the winning attack with three singles in four times at bat.

Last year's titlist, Klein Tavern, also won its engagement yesterday, taking a 7-to-3 decision from Washington Packard for its secon consecutive triumph. Bill Liggett was the winning pitcher, holding the opposition to three safeties. Nau's three hits in five times was best for the winners.

High lights of Section "B" was the Washington Cubs' narrow 7-to-6 victory over Arcade Market. Guerra and Brown had two-base hits at the Cubs came from 3 runs behind to knot the count in the sixth and take the judgment with another talley in the seventh. Degroot and Guerra shared the mound assignment for the winners.

Hartnett Stays At Home as Cubs Move Eastward

Chicago, May 12 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs left tonight on their first swing around the Eastern half of the National League without Manager Gabby Hartnett.

Hartnett stayed behind to serve as a pallbearer tomorrow at the funeral of Danny Cahill, No. 1 Cub fan who had gone to spring training with the squad for many years. Cahill died last Thursday night of an heart attack.

The Cub manager will rejoin his players Tuesday in Boston.

Sergeant Jasper Post nine, of the Junior American Legion Baseball League, kept pace with Cooley-McCullough at the top of the standings yesterday when it issued Police Post its second setback of the season, 6 to 3. Wilkerson held the losers to eight safeties, fanned four and gave up a pair of walks.

In another league game Fort Stevens Post took its first victory of the season when it staged an eight-run uprising in the seventh to beat National Cathedral, 9 to 8. The game was called after the spree due to a time limit. Rye's homer featured the battle.

Grays Defeat N. Y. Cubans' Nine, 8-6, 6-5

4,000 Fans Watch Local Colored Team Win Double-Header

Representing the Nation's Capital in the Negro National League, the Homestead Grays yesterday won a double-header from Ben Taylor's New York Cubans, 8-6 and 6-5, before 4,000 fans at Griffith Stadium.

Judge Armond W. Scott threw out the first ball, inaugurating the league's eighth consecutive season. The teams went scoreless for three innings. But in the fourth the Grays cut loose to score four runs and were never headed thereafter.

The nightcap, however, was another story. The first two Cuban batters to face Hicks hit safely to rightfield. Carrera walked, but was forced at second when Crespo hit a liner to Jell Jackson. Hicks hit Linarez on the shoulder, and walked Heredia, Julio and Casey in succession, forcing Linarez across the plate, behind Nukard and Coimbre. This gave the visitors three runs.

The Cubans added two runs in the fourth when Hamilton, who relieved Hicks, gave Casey a walk and Figuera hit safely. Casey scored on Coimbre's hit to centerfield and Figuera scored when Carrera went out, Carlisle to Buck Leonard.

A big fifth inning for the Grays, who had scored a run in the first, tied the count at 5-all. Whatley led off with a smashing hit to center. Benjamin went out, pitcher to first, and Harris flied out to leftfield.

With two down, Buck Leonard crashed one against the centerfield wall for three bases, driving Whatley across the plate. Leonard scored on Easterling's drive over second, and Carlisle hit a home run to the coffin corner, scoring Easterling ahead of him.

The Grays won the ball game in the fifth, when Harris singled Hamilton across with a single to center. Hamilton struck out the last three Cubans to face him, giving him a total of nine strikeouts.

Listen! with Slocum

After two faintly humiliating efforts at playing softball, WJSV's noble warriors came through with a stirring and slightly surprising effort yesterday that resulted in an 11-to-2 victory over a group representing Washington's moving picture operators.

Sammy Ferro who plays drums and doubles in brass for Paul Kain's Band pitched five scoreless innings and was followed by James Hurlbut, the gent who "censors" WJSV's commercial copy and doubles in the newsroom. Both were exceedingly good, a fact which when added to the movie folks' general confusion tells the story of the game. Next week all will be different, because the Georgetown Dental College Allumni will play WJSV and if advance reports on the Dentists are true it is hoped and expected that the good teeth yankers will bring along their novocaine.

Speaking of Sammy Ferro and Paul Kain's Band it brings to mind the fact that Paul and his WJSV houseband are packing 'em in down at Glen Echo. Paul's lads are nothing if not versatile. I have seen them send jitterbugs off into a seventh heaven of ecstasy, turn the lights on in a retired major's eyes with a march, send grandma into action with one of Strauss' gems, or untangle a Latin with a tango.

This business of blowing gently into a saxaphone three or four evenings a week, or plucking a bass viol in three-quarter time a few hours each evening has always made me wish I had kept up with my violin lessons. But not after watching Kain and his lads at work. For an evening's session at Glen Echo they spend countless hours making hideous noises around the WJSV studio. That evening everything comes out smooth and danceable, but the endless hours of sawing away at a few bars just to get 'em right must do something to the lads' general outlook on life.

Orphans in Love

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since the days both were children together at St. Joseph's Orphanage. Peter refuses to declare his love for Ellen, fearing they would be impoverished on his small salary should they marry while he is studying law. While picnicking near the orphanage, a storm causes them to take refuge in the old Tucker house, a deserted old mansion forbidden to them when they were children. In a picture on the wall they see a man with a face so similar to Peter's that Ellen mistakes it for Peter's picture. In a book in the living room titled "Notable New Yorkers" they learn the man in the picture on the wall is Peter Tucker, a Revolutionary War hero. When the couple leaves the mansion, Peter states the house is a challenge and he will never be content with less. Deep in his thoughts, Peter wanders through a tenement district when a building bursts into flames. Three little boys are trapped in the fire. Peter, stricken with fear, remembers Jonathan Tucker's courage and rushes to their rescue. The newspaper reporters swarm Peter's hospital and one representative, Carver of the Press, is admitted to Peter's room for an interview.

Chapter 7

IT WAS with an effort that Mr. Carver refrained from rubbing his hands together in satisfaction. What a story!

With an even greater effort he kept his voice from becoming too eager. With desperate nonchalance, he asked: "Who was this other fellow?"

"Oh, just somebody I've been reading about. You wouldn't know him." Now that Peter had put his thought into words, he began to feel sheepish.

"I suppose not. Funny thing, though, I knew a man once . . ."

Outside in the corridor, the other young gentlemen of the press fidgeted and smoked innumerable cigarettes and made endless telephone calls to impatient editors.

Half an hour passed. Miss O'Hara took in Peter's breakfast tray, and as she opened the door, the words which came to the eager ears in the corridor were: " . . . take DiMaggio, now. When he makes a hit . . ."

Peter was enjoying his visitor. Newspapermen had the jobs, he decided. Passes to the World Series, and all that. And they were regular, no denying that. Take Carver. He was all right.

He was, indeed. He was an all right guy, and he was an A-1 newspaperman. When he left, an hour later, he knew all about Jonathan Tucker and the tribute paid him by George Washington, and the first triumphant voyage of the White Star. Peter had not even felt the extraction.

True, Carver had not learned about the old Tucker house and the portrait over the fireplace because those details Peter would never have mentioned. But he was on the way to another source of information.

It came about quite naturally.

"Sure there isn't somebody I can get in touch with for you?" Carver asked as he was about to leave.

Peter hesitated. "Matter of fact," he admitted, "I did have a date this afternoon.

"But I hate to ask the nurse to phone for me. You know how a girl would feel, hearing you were in the hospital."

Can't Explain

"She'd be scared to death! You just can't explain some things over the telephone. Why not let me get in touch with her for you. I'd be glad to. Where does she live?"

"West One Hundred and Fifteenth. I wouldn't want——"

"Hundred and Fifteenth? That's a cinch. I live down at a Hundred and Thirteenth myself." That was a lie. Mr. Carver lived in Brooklyn.

Peter brightened. "You wouldn't mind, then? If you'd just drop by and explain . . ."

"Sure I will. I'll tell her where you are and how it all happened and that you're O. K. Absolutely O. K."

"Thanks a lot, Carver."

"Don't mention it. It's right on my way home from the subway . . . Well, so long, Storm. It was swell meeting you, and I mean that. I'd like to shake hands, but it looks as if you'll be flapping fins instead for a while. It'll be tough on you if anybody lets in any boll weevils."

Peter laughed. "Goodbye, Carver."

From Sheridan Square in Greenwich Village, it takes exactly 23 minutes in the subway to reach One Hundred and Sixteenth street.

Twenty-nine minutes later, Mr. Carver was seated in the righteously respectable living room of the residence club, waiting for Ellen.

"Miss Carlan," so the sharp-featured young woman at the desk had informed him, "is at church." Her tone implied a criticism of any young man who was not there himself.

So he waited, enjoying the severe atmosphere no better than had Peter. Women of all ages, plain and uninteresting, eyed him curiously as they passed in and out of the living room on vague, trumped-up errands. He wondered indifferently how many of them lived alone and liked it. And why Storm had to choose a girl from here.

His wait, however, was rewarded. He looked up, brightening perceptibly, when the red-haired girl with the fair skin and deep blue eyes entered the room.

He liked the way she wore her trim navy suit with its wide, white starched revers, and the quick sureness of her step. He liked her soft, pleasant voice as she introduced herself.

"I'm Miss Carlan." There was a question in her eyes.

Glad Relief

He jumped to his feet, smiling in sort of a glad relief, and held out his hand.

"I'm Carver, of the press. Can we get out of here, Miss Carlan, and find some place to talk?"

Still her eyes questioned. "You're sure I'm the one you want?"

"Positive, now that I see you. I've a message from Peter Storm."

The blue eyes widened. "From Peter? Where is he?"

"He's just detained a bit. Suppose we walk down to the Drive and I'll tell you all about it."

Later, when he had set her fears for Peter's safety at rest, she proved a most willing consultant. She quite agreed with Mr. Carver that Peter deserved all the acclaim the public might offer. To think he'd risked his life . . . Why, she would have seen his bust placed in the Hall of Fame, if she had known how to go about it.

"And did you ever hear him speak of Jonathan Tucker?" Mr. Carver asked her finally.

"Speak of him? Peter's been thinking and talking of nobody else all this week. Ever since . . ." She explained their emergeney visit to the Tucker house, about their fascination for the old place ever since they were children at St. Peter's.

She told him all about the surprising portrait over the fireplace. And of course she had a picture of Peter—just a small snapshot, but an excellent likeness.

Spoke Freely

She spoke freely and enthusiastically, bringing out each detail in all its significance. Her eyes sparkled with the telling, and her heart beat with a warm, sweet excitement.

The moment was bright and glorious: there was no cloud on her horizon, no dull warning that her words were the instruments which would put Peter out of her life forever.

The river was strongly alive this evening. The ferries plying between Fort Lee and the Manhattan side, usually so clumsy and slow-moving, like fat old ladies waddling up a hill, seemed to skim the surface of the water.

A low, small launch, invisible save for the red glow of its lantern, moved slowly north against the current, and from it there floated the soft echo of a girl's voice, the tender serenade of a guitar.

A fireboat passed by, swinging its bright beacon over the sky in wide arcs. Midstream, a Navy destroyer lay at anchor, its dark outline an ominous silhouette against the garish brilliance of the amusement park atop the Palisades.

Waters Surge

All of life, thought the man on the terrace, was reflected in the river—love and laughter, industry and destruction; all was captured in the constant, inescapable surge of the waters.

So was each man caught up by the circumstances of his living: so was he carried along by the forces of his destiny as inevitably as frail driftwood is picked up by the river and swept before it. So was each man.

He drew out a cigarette, lit it slowly. In the glow of the match, his eyes were dull and tired. Each man, he thought. Each man? He shook his head thoughtfully. No, not each man.

To Be Continued.

Proposed Extension To Dependents Aired Over WOL Forum

A House bill providing pensions for dependent widows, orphans and parents of World War veterans was denounced last night as the opening wedge for general veteran pensions, and defended as a just benefit for needy survivors of those who were "willing to give their all" in defense of a grateful Nation."

Arguments over the proposal, which will be placed before the House today, were aired in the American Forum of the Air, broadcast to the Nation from the Willard Hotel, via WOL.

United States Policy Recited

Opposing the measure were Representative John M. Costello (Democrat), of California, of the House Military Affairs Committee; Robert B. Luchars, commander of the American Veterans Association, and Representative William J. Milller (Republican), of Connecticut, who lost his legs fighting with the American Expeditionary Force. Defenders were Representative James E. Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, former head of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Millard Rice, V. F. W. legislative representative, and Col. John T. Taylor, head of the American Legion legislative committee.

Van Zandt said it has been the policy of the American Government since the days of Valley Forge to pay pensions to the veteran and his dependents on the theory that they have an "honest claim" on the Federal Government. He quoted Washington, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson and Coolidge as favoring this principle.

Many Legally Inelegible

Less than 9 per cent of the 4,791,172 men and women who served in the American armed forces are receiving benefits today from the Government, Van Zandt declared.

He insisted the bill was advocated by the V. F. W. because "thousands of veterans developed disabilities which they honestly believed to have been caused by their military service but which they have been unable to prove legally to the satisfaction of the Veterans' Administration." The average veteran, he added, leaves a wife and three children on his death.

Cost of the bill would be about $10,000,000 annually, Representative Van Zandt estimated, pointing out that the "needs clause" of the bill would "render inelegible 75 per cent" of the potential beneficiaries.

Representative Costello, disputing the figures offered by Van Zandt, said the cost of the program in the bill would run up to $48,000,000 during the first year, and increase each year, so that in all it would cost $5,000,000,000. He maintained that the World War veterans had been treated better than any of their predecessors and had been provided with $11,000,000,000 in benefits since the war. He accused the backers of the bill with maneuvering to obtain a general pension for all veterans, a charge heatedly denied by opposition speakers.

Sees Treasury Raid

"I heartily urge full and adequate compensation for the wartime disabled, but can only protest when an effort is made to legislate benefits for those who have no justifiable claim thereto," said Costello.

"The passage of the bill will but open the door to allow the veterans to demand pensions for themselves without the necessity of showing either the service connection of their disability or even the need of showing any disability. To do that means that the floodgates will have been opened and the Federal Treasury drained of untold billions of dollars."

Col. Taylor questioned Costello's figures and pointed out that widows and orphans of veterans in other American wars were receiving pensions. Rice argued that the veterans' dependents had to be taken care of some way and that the Federal Government, by assuming the responsibility, would thus allow local governments to widen their other relief activities.

Representative Miller and A. V. A. Commander Luchers joined Costello in contending that the bill moved in direction of a general pension and that they favored more liberal provisions for disabled veterans and their dependents. Theodore Granik, Washington columnist, presided.

Morris Tracy, 50, Dies in Pinehurst; Boston Newsman

Boston, May 12 (AP).—Word was received here today of the death at Pinehurst, N. C., of Morris de Haven Tracy, 50, one-time bureau manager of the United Press, and for the past several years a reporter for the Boston Traveler and Herald. He was taken ill on a vacation trip.

A native of Eureka, California, Tracy attended Pomona College, and began with the Humboldt Evening Standard in his home town, a journalistic career that embraced some of the outstanding news stories of the past 20 years.

His reports of shipwrecks off the Pacific Coast drew the attention of the United Press in 1916. He became manager of its Los Angeles bureau and later served in that capacity in San Francisco. Subsequently, he worked in New York and Washington. He resigned from the news service in 1935 to write a book.

Daughters of Depression Tell Woes to Jury of D. C. Notables

An all-feminine blue ribbon jury sat in a smoke-filled, packed hotel ballroom yesterday and listened for three hours to "Daughters of the American Depression" tell of their struggle to get enough to eat.

David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, promised the jury, which included Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Miss Josephine Roche, Mrs. Charles Putnam and Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, some interesting facts. He called on Mrs. Lucy Davis, of Lancaster, Pa.

Her husband, she said, had been a "journalist." He is now working for $75 a month on WPA. They could not put anything aside for emergencies. To a question from the jury about housing conditions among relief people in Lancaster, she told of one case in which 40 persons lived in one shack.

Mrs. Sarah Greenberg, of Philadelphia, testified that for a time, she fared on $4.80 a week; had paid $3 room rent and eaten "sardines and other things" on the remaining $1.80. (She is on the WPA now and doing better).

Mrs. Marie Schmidt, of Tampa, Fla., said she received $46 a month from the WPA and "all we hear is more speed, more speed." She knew a mother of 10 children who went home of week-ends with a $1 food voucher for the children. The mother said to Mrs. Sthmidt, "I will put them to pulling moss."

"What kind of Moss?" the jury inquired. "Spanish moss," explained Mrs. Schmidt. "They must pull 100 pounds of Spanish moss for 25 cents," she said. Asked about the children's ages, she told the jury "the ages are from the time they come out of the cradle."

Mrs. Ann White, on the WPA in Detroit, said she was paid $68.90 a month. "After hearing what other people are saying here I think we (in Detroit) are living in a land of milk and honey."

At 4 p. m., the convention adjourned to permit war mothers in it to visit Arlington National Cemetery. But not before the jury had received the answer "I don't know" to each question of "what would you do if you or your family got sick," or "what would you do but for public relief?"

Two meals, to show how relief women fare, will be served Thursday night at the Roger Smith Hotel, convention headquarters. One will cost 5 cents; the other 9 cents. Mrs. Roosevelt will join other prominent women in eating the cheaper meal. Miss Hilda Smith, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Howell Morehead, Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Mrs. Murray Latimer, Mrs. Margaret Wallace, Miss Helen Gahagan, Miss Minnie May Flemming, Mrs. Charter Heslep, Mrs. Charles McNary and Mrs. Irene B. Caldwell were on the jury panel.

"Blackout" Halts Session

An impromptu "blackout" last night sidetracked the business session of the gathering until this morning. Only action taken before the lights went out and forced adjournment was the election of a steering committee to draft resolutions.

They include Esther Browning, Minnesota; Lydia Ferguson, Ohio; Edith Morris, California; Belle Cazanov, New York; Bertha Dargan, North Carolina; Mrs. Maud P. Bell, Maryland; Mrs. Hughes Easley, Missouri; Nana Poulnot, Florida; Dorothy Semedo, Massachusetts; Honora Poles, District of Columbia, and Olive Fontaine, Pennsylvania. Michigan, Illinois and New Jersey were to be included.

Traffic Toll Up in Maryland

Baltimore, May 12 (AP).—Maryland traffic fatalities for the first four months of 1940 totaled 134, an increase of 18 as compared with the corresponding period last year, it was reported today by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin.

The death toll for April was 46, or 15 more than for that month a year ago.

The four-month survey showed that in January and February fewer deaths occurred than for the first two months of 1939, but big increases in March and April, 1940, were responsible for the upswing.

Prince Georges County led the State for April with a total of 12 deaths. Baltimore City, with 10, was next.
